Lack of Diligence. York County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, York County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 28, 2019. See York County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45191-DAP, ECF No. 52. York County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, York County elected not to do so. Instead, York County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. York County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to York County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for York County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for York County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, York County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to York County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified York County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but York County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, York County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1

(emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. York County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against York County’s potential claims against them. York County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But York County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. York County, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. York County is a plaintiff in Maine. York County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for York County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. York County filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See York County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45191-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that York County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 21, 2022. York County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. York County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. York County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1074. City of Waterville v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45193-DAP: Plaintiff Waterville City, Maine

Waterville City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Waterville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Waterville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Waterville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Waterville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Waterville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Waterville City filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on March 28, 2019. See City of Waterville v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45193-DAP, ECF No. 56. Waterville City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Waterville City elected not to do so. Instead, Waterville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Waterville City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Waterville City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Waterville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Waterville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Waterville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Waterville City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Waterville City filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, but waited until June 19, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—more than a year and a half later. See City of Waterville v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45193-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: June 19, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Waterville City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Waterville City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Waterville City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Waterville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Waterville City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Waterville City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Waterville City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Waterville City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Waterville City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Waterville City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Waterville City’s potential claims against them. Waterville City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Waterville City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Waterville City filed its original complaint on November 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. *See City of Waterville v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Waterville City, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1075. Androscoggin County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45205-DAP: Plaintiff Androscoggin County, Maine

Androscoggin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Androscoggin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Androscoggin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Androscoggin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Androscoggin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Androscoggin County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Androscoggin County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo

1076. City of Geneva, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45214-DAP: Plaintiff Geneva City, New York

Geneva City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Geneva City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Geneva City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Geneva City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Geneva City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Geneva City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Geneva City amended its complaint on June 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 1, 2019. See City of Geneva, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45214-DAP, ECF No. 76. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Geneva City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Geneva City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Geneva City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Geneva City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Geneva City filed its original complaint on March 13, 2019. See City of Geneva, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45214-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Geneva City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Geneva City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Geneva City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Geneva City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Geneva City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Geneva City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Geneva City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Geneva City filed its original complaint on March 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Geneva, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45214-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Geneva City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Geneva City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Geneva City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Geneva City, a city in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Geneva City’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1077. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Otero, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45216-DAP: Plaintiff Otero County, New Mexico

Otero County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Otero County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Otero County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Otero County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Otero County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Otero County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Otero County amended its complaint on June 28, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 1, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Otero, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45216-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Otero County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Otero County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Otero County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Otero County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Otero County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Otero County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Otero County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Otero County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Otero County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—nine months later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Otero, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45216-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Otero County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Otero County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Otero County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Otero County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Otero County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Otero County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Otero County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Otero County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Otero, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45216-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Otero County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Otero County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Otero County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Otero County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1078. County of Navajo v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45217-DAP: Plaintiff Navajo County, Arizona

Navajo County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Navajo County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Navajo County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Navajo County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Navajo County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Navajo County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Navajo County amended its complaint on June 5, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 1, 2019, as well as on January 7, 2021. See County of Navajo v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45217-DAP, ECF Nos. 8, 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Navajo County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Navajo County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Navajo County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Navajo County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Navajo County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.25% market share for Navajo County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Navajo County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Arizona law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Navajo County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Arizona law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Navajo County, a municipality in Arizona, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Navajo County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Navajo County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Navajo County, a municipality in Arizona, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1079. City of Beverly v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45219-DAP: Plaintiff Beverly City, Massachusetts

Beverly City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Beverly City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Beverly City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Beverly City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Beverly City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Beverly City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Beverly City amended its complaint on June 28, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 2, 2019. See City of Beverly v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45219-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Beverly City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Beverly City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Beverly City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Beverly City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Beverly City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Beverly City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Beverly City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Beverly City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Beverly City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Beverly City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Beverly City filed its original complaint on March 4, 2019. See City of Beverly v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45219-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Beverly City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Beverly City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Beverly City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Beverly City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Beverly City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Beverly City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Beverly City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Beverly City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Beverly City filed its original complaint on March 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Beverly v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45219-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Beverly City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Beverly City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Beverly City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Beverly City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Beverly City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 4, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Beverly City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1080. City of Memphis v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45220-DAP: Plaintiff Memphis City, Tennessee

Memphis City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Memphis City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Memphis City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Memphis City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Memphis City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Memphis City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Memphis City amended its complaint on July 1, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 2, 2019. See City of Memphis v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45220-DAP, ECF No. 29. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Memphis City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Memphis City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Memphis City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Memphis City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Memphis City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Memphis City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Memphis City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Memphis City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Memphis City began receiving those services on January 1, 2018. See id. Inasmuch as Memphis City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl.

¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Memphis City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than six years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Memphis City’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Memphis City filed its original complaint on March 7, 2019. See City of Memphis v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45220-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Memphis City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Memphis City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Memphis City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Memphis City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Memphis City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Memphis City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Memphis City, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Memphis City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Memphis City filed its original complaint on March 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of Memphis v. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Memphis City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Memphis City, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1081. City of Lakewood v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45221-DAP: Plaintiff Lakewood City, Washington

Lakewood City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lakewood City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lakewood City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lakewood City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lakewood City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lakewood City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lakewood City amended its complaint on June 17, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 2, 2019. See City of Lakewood v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45221-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lakewood City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lakewood City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Lakewood City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lakewood City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lakewood City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Lakewood City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lakewood City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Lakewood City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.21% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lakewood City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lakewood City filed its original complaint on March 6, 2019. See City of Lakewood v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45221-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lakewood City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lakewood City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lakewood City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lakewood City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lakewood City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lakewood City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lakewood City, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lakewood City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lakewood City filed its original complaint on March 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Lakewood v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45221-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lakewood City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lakewood City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lakewood City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Lakewood City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Lakewood City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 6, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lakewood City, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1082. County Commission of Washington County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45222-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, Oklahoma

Washington County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Washington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Washington County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 2, 2019. See County Commission of Washington County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45222-DAP, ECF No. 7. Washington County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Washington County elected not to do so. Instead, Washington County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Washington County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Washington County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See County Commission of Washington County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45222-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago,

Washington County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Washington County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Washington County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Washington County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Washington County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Washington County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Washington County, a municipality in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Washington County is a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Washington County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma’s public nuisance law does not extend to “the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids.” Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Washington County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Washington County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County Commission of Washington County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45222-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Washington County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Washington County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Washington County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washington County, a municipality in Oklahoma, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1083. County Commission of Okmulgee County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45223-DAP: Plaintiff Okmulgee County, Oklahoma

Okmulgee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Okmulgee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Okmulgee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Okmulgee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Okmulgee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Okmulgee County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.49% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Okmulgee County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Okmulgee County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. *See County Commission of Okmulgee County, Oklahoma v. 1084. County Commission of Rogers County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45224-DAP: Plaintiff Rogers County, Oklahoma

Rogers County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rogers County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rogers County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rogers County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Rogers County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Creek County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019. See County Commission of Creek County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45226-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Creek County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Creek County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Creek County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Creek County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Creek County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Creek County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Creek County, a municipality in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Creek County is a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Creek County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma's public nuisance law does not extend to "the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids." Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Creek County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Creek County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See County Commission of Creek County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45226-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Creek County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Creek County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Creek County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Creek County, a municipality in Oklahoma, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1087. County Commissioner of Mayes County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45227-DAP: Plaintiff Mayes County, Oklahoma

Mayes County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mayes County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mayes County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mayes County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mayes County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Mayes County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover,

Mayes County filed its original complaint on March 12, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 2, 2019. See County Commissioner of Mayes County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45227-DAP, ECF No. 7. Mayes County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Mayes County elected not to do so. Instead, Mayes County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Mayes County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Mayes County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Mayes County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Mayes County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

1088. Meigs County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45229-DAP: Plaintiff Meigs County, Ohio

Meigs County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Meigs County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Meigs County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Meigs County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Meigs County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Meigs County filed its original complaint on November 8, 2018. See Meigs County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45229-DAP, ECF No. 11. Despite filing its case years ago, Meigs County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Meigs County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Meigs County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 1089. Washington County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45230-DAP: Plaintiff Marietta City, Ohio

Marietta City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Marietta City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Marietta City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Marietta City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Marietta City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Marietta City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Marietta City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Marietta City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

1090. Washington County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45230-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, Ohio

Washington County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington

County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Washington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Washington County filed its original complaint on November 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 11, 2019. See Washington County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45230-DAP, ECF No. 33. Washington County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Washington County elected not to do so. Instead, Washington County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Washington County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Washington County filed its original complaint on November 7, 2018. See Washington County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45230-DAP, ECF No. 5. Despite filing its case years ago, Washington County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Washington County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Washington County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Washington County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Washington County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Washington County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Washington County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Washington County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Washington County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Washington County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above.

Washington County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Washington County's potential claims against them. Washington County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Washington County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Washington County, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Washington County is a plaintiff in Ohio. Washington County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Washington County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Washington County filed its original complaint on November 7, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Washington County, Ohio v. Cardinal Health, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45230-DAP, ECF No. 5. Even assuming arguendo that Washington County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 7, 2022. Washington County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Washington County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washington County, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1091. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45231-DAP: Plaintiff Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes, Oklahoma

Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes’ untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes failed to provide notice of their proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because their untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes’ motion should be denied due to futility, as Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes do not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to their alleged harm, their proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, their

RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and they lack standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes were on notice of their claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes filed their original complaint on November 29, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 11, 2019. See Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45231-DAP, ECF No. 21. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes could have amended their complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes elected not to do so. Instead, Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes waited five years after their deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes' lack of diligence in pursuing their claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes' geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes' geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes’ delay in seeking to amend their complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes, together a single tribal government in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to their injuries. Instead, they rely exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes seek leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in three cases: Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. McKesson Corporation, et al., No. 1:19-op-45187-DAP; Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes v. Purdue Pharma LP, et al., No. 1:19-op-45231-DAP; and Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. Watson Laboratories Inc., et al., No. 1:19-op-45232-DAP. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes’ impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes are a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes' request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma's public nuisance law does not extend to "the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids." Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes' proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes filed their original complaint on November 29, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which they now seek to recover under RICO against the PBMs. *See Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes v. 1092. Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. Watson Laboratories Inc et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45232-DAP: Plaintiff Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes, Oklahoma

Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Instead, they rely exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in three cases: Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. McKesson

Corporation, et al., No. 1:19-op-45187-DAP; Cheyenne and Arapaho Tribes v. Purdue Pharma LP, et al., No. 1:19-op-45231-DAP; and *Cheyenne & Arapaho Tribes v. 1093. Montgomery County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45234-DAP: Plaintiff Montgomery County, Virginia

Montgomery County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Montgomery County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Montgomery County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Montgomery County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Montgomery County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Montgomery County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on August 27, 2018. See Montgomery County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45234-DAP, ECF No. 1-1–1-3 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Montgomery County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 70 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Montgomery County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Montgomery County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBM entities. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Montgomery County's complaint, Montgomery County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Montgomery County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Montgomery County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Montgomery County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Montgomery County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Montgomery County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Montgomery County filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, but waited until July 5, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—almost six years later. See Montgomery County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45234-DAP, ECF No. 1-1-1-3; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 5, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Montgomery County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Montgomery County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Montgomery County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Montgomery County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Montgomery County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Montgomery County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Montgomery County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Montgomery County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Montgomery County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Montgomery County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Montgomery County’s potential claims against them. Montgomery County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Montgomery County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Montgomery County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Montgomery County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Montgomery County filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Montgomery County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45234-DAP, ECF No. 1-1–1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Montgomery County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 27, 2022. Montgomery County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Montgomery County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Montgomery County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1094. Giles County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45236-DAP: Plaintiff Giles County, Virginia

Giles County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Giles County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Giles County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Giles County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Giles County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Giles County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on August 27, 2018. See Giles County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45236-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Giles County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 71 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Giles County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Giles County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBM entities. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Giles County's complaint, Giles County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Giles County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Giles County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Giles County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Giles County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Giles County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Giles County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Giles County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Giles County's potential claims against them. Giles County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Giles County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Giles County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Giles County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Giles County filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Giles County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45236-DAP, ECF No. 36. Even assuming arguendo that Giles County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 27, 2022. Giles County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Giles County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Giles County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1095. County of Jasper v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45238-DAP: Plaintiff Jasper County, Texas

Jasper County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jasper County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jasper County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jasper County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Jasper County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jasper County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jasper County filed its original complaint on November 5, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 15, 2019. See County of Jasper v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45238-DAP, ECF No. 19. Jasper County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jasper County elected not to do so. Instead, Jasper County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jasper County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jasper County filed its original complaint on November 5, 2018. See County of Jasper v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45238-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Jasper County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Jasper County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jasper County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jasper County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jasper County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jasper County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jasper County, a municipality in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jasper County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jasper County filed its original complaint on November 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Jasper v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45238-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Jasper County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 5, 2022. Jasper County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jasper County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jasper County, a municipality in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1096. County of Hardin v. Endo Health Solutions, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45241-DAP: Plaintiff Hardin County, Texas

Hardin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hardin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hardin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hardin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hardin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hardin County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hardin County filed its original complaint on December 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 15, 2019. See County of Hardin v. Endo Health Solutions, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45241-DAP, ECF No. 16. Hardin County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hardin County elected not to do so. Instead, Hardin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hardin County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hardin County filed its original complaint on December 7, 2018. See County of Hardin v. Endo Health Solutions, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45241-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Hardin County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hardin County, a municipality in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1097. County of Newton v. Endo Health Solutions Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45242-DAP: Plaintiff Newton County, Texas

Newton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Newton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Newton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Newton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Newton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Newton County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Newton County filed its original complaint on December 7, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 15, 2019. See County of Newton v. Endo Health Solutions Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45242-DAP, ECF No. 13. Newton County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Newton County elected not to do so. Instead, Newton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Newton County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Newton County filed its original complaint on December 7, 2018. See County of Newton v. Endo Health Solutions Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45242-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Newton County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Newton County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Newton County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Newton County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Newton County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Newton County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Newton County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Newton County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Newton County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Newton County's potential claims against them. Newton County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Newton County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Newton County, a municipality in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1098. City of Galax, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45243-DAP: Plaintiff Galax City, Virginia

Galax City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Galax City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Galax City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Galax City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Galax City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Galax City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on August 27, 2018. See City of Galax, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45243-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Galax City also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019, to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 70 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Galax City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Galax City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Galax City's complaint, Galax City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Galax City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Galax City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Galax City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Galax City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Galax City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Galax City filed its original complaint on August 27, 2018, but waited until August 8, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—almost six years later. See City of Galax, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45243-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 8, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Galax City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Galax City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Galax City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Galax City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Galax City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Galax City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Galax City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Galax City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Galax City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Galax City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Galax City’s potential claims against them. Galax City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Galax City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Galax City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1099. Henry County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45245-DAP: Plaintiff Henry County, Virginia

Henry County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Henry County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Henry County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Henry County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Henry County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Henry County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on October 3, 2018. See Henry County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45245-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Henry County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 79 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Henry County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Henry County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. Section II.A, above. Henry County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Henry County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Henry County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018, but waited until August 8, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—almost six years later. *See Henry County, Virginia v. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Henry County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Henry County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Henry County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Henry County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Henry County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Henry County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Henry County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Henry County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Henry County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Henry County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Henry County’s potential claims against them. Henry County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Henry County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Henry County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Henry County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Henry County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Henry County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45245-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Henry County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 3, 2022. Henry County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Henry County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Henry County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1100. City of Alexandria v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45246-DAP: Plaintiff Alexandria City, Virginia

Alexandria City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alexandria City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alexandria City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alexandria City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Alexandria City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alexandria City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on March 14, 2018. See City of Alexandria v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45246-DAP, ECF No. 1-2–1-3 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Alexandria City also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 69 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Alexandria City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Alexandria City’s deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Alexandria City’s complaint, Alexandria City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Alexandria City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Alexandria City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Alexandria City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2018, but waited until July 24, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—almost six years later. See City of Alexandria v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45246-DAP, ECF No. 1-2-1-3; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 24, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Alexandria City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Alexandria City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Alexandria City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Alexandria City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

1101. Pittsylvania County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45247-DAP: Plaintiff Pittsylvania County, Virginia

Pittsylvania County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pittsylvania County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pittsylvania County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pittsylvania County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pittsylvania County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pittsylvania County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on September 26, 2018. See Pittsylvania County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45247-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Pittsylvania County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 79 (adding claims against Express Scripts

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pittsylvania County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Pittsylvania County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Pittsylvania County filed its original complaint on September 26, 2018, but waited until August 12, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—almost six years later. See Pittsylvania County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45247-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 12, 2024).

This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Pittsylvania County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pittsylvania County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1102. City of Cullman, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45248-DAP: Plaintiff Cullman City, Alabama

Cullman City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cullman City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cullman City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cullman City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cullman City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Cullman City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Cullman City amended its complaint on July 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 16, 2019. See City of Cullman, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45248-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Cullman City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Cullman City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Cullman City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Cullman City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Cullman City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Cullman City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Cullman City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Cullman City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Cullman City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Cullman City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Cullman City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Cullman City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Cullman City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Cullman City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Cullman City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Cullman City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Cullman City's potential claims against them. Cullman City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Cullman City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Cullman City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Cullman City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Cullman City filed its original complaint on March 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Cullman, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45248-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Cullman City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Cullman City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Cullman City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Cullman City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Cullman City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Cullman City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1103. City of Norton, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45249-DAP: Plaintiff Norton City, Virginia

Norton City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Norton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Norton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Norton City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Norton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Norton City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on October 22, 2018. See City of Norton, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45249-DAP, ECF No. 1-2–1-3 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Norton City also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 71 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Norton City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Norton City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Norton City's complaint, Norton City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Norton City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Norton City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Norton City filed its original complaint on October 22, 2018, but waited until July 25, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See City of

Norton, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45249-DAP, ECF No. 1-2–1-3; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 25, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Norton City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Norton City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Norton City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Norton City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Norton City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Norton City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Norton City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Norton City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Norton City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Norton City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Norton City’s potential claims against them. Norton City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Norton City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Norton City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Norton City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Norton City filed its original complaint on October 22, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Norton, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45249-DAP, ECF No. 1-2–1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Norton City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 22, 2022. Norton City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Norton City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Norton City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1104. Lee County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45251-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, Virginia

Lee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lee County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on October 22, 2018. See Lee County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45251-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Lee County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 75 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Lee County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Lee County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Lee County's complaint, Lee County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Lee County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lee County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lee County filed its original complaint on October 22, 2018, but waited until August 9, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See Lee County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45251-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 9, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lee County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

1105. Dickenson County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45252-DAP: Plaintiff Dickenson County, Virginia

Dickenson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dickenson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dickenson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dickenson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dickenson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dickenson County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on March 14, 2018. See Dickenson County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45252-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Dickenson County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 61 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Dickenson County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. 1106. Washington County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45254-DAP: Plaintiff Washington County, Virginia

Washington County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Washington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Washington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Washington County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Washington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Washington County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1107. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45256-DAP: Plaintiff Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Wisconsin

Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on November 5, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 16, 2019. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45256-DAP, ECF No. 19. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa elected not to do so. Instead, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on November 5, 2018. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45256-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on November 5, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45256-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on November 5, 2022. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1108. Kennebec County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45257-DAP: Plaintiff Kennebec County, Maine

Kennebec County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kennebec County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kennebec County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kennebec County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kennebec County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kennebec County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kennebec County filed its original complaint on January 18, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 16, 2019. See Kennebec County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45257-DAP, ECF No. 47. Kennebec County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kennebec County elected not to do so. Instead, Kennebec County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kennebec County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kennebec County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Kennebec County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kennebec County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Kennebec County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Kennebec County filed its original complaint on January 18, 2019, but waited until June 19, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—almost one and a half years later. See Kennebec County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45257-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: June 19, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Kennebec County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kennebec County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Kennebec County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Kennebec County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Kennebec County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Kennebec County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Kennebec County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Kennebec County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Kennebec County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Kennebec County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Kennebec County’s potential claims against them. Kennebec County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment

Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kennebec County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kennebec County, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Kennebec County is a plaintiff in Maine. Kennebec County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kennebec County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kennebec County filed its original complaint on January 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Kennebec County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45257-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Kennebec County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 18, 2023. Kennebec County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kennebec County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1109. Cumberland County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45259-DAP: Plaintiff Cumberland County, Maine

Cumberland County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cumberland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cumberland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cumberland County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cumberland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1110. County of Ionia, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45261-DAP: Plaintiff Ionia County, Michigan

Ionia County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ionia County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Baldwin County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Baldwin County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Baldwin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Baldwin County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Baldwin County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Baldwin County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Baldwin County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Baldwin County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Baldwin County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Baldwin County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Baldwin County, Alabama v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation, et al., No. 1:18-op-45152-DAP; and Baldwin County, Alabama v. Sackler, et al., No. 1:19-op-45264-DAP. Baldwin County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Baldwin County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Baldwin County filed its original complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Baldwin County, AL v. Sackler et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45264-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Baldwin County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Baldwin County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Baldwin County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Baldwin County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Baldwin County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on March 18, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Baldwin County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Baldwin County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1113. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lea v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45266-DAP: Plaintiff Lea County, New Mexico

Lea County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lea County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lea County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lea County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lea County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lea County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lea County amended its complaint on July 15, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 17, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lea v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45266-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lea County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lea County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lea County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lea County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lea County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lea County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Lea County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lea County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lea County filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lea v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45266-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lea County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lea County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lea County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lea County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lea County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lea County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lea County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lea County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lea County filed its original complaint on March 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lea v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45266-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lea County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lea County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lea County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lea County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1114. City of Tucson v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45267-DAP: Plaintiff Tucson City, Arizona

Tucson City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tucson City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tucson City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tucson City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Tucson City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tucson City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tucson City filed its original complaint on January 17, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 17, 2019. See City of Tucson v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45267-DAP, ECF No. 17. Tucson City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tucson City elected not to do so. Instead, Tucson City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tucson City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Tucson City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Tucson City filed its original complaint on January 17, 2019, but waited until September 11, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five and a half years later. See City of Tucson v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45267-DAP, ECF No. 1-3; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 11, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Tucson City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Tucson City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Purdue Pharma LP et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45267-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Tucson City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 17, 2023. Tucson City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. 1115. County of Pima v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45268-DAP: Plaintiff Pima County, Arizona

Pima County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pima County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pima County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pima County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pima County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pima County, a municipality in Arizona, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1116. County of Fannin v. Rite Aid of Georgia, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45269-DAP: Plaintiff Fannin County, Georgia

Fannin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fannin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fannin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fannin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fannin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fannin County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fannin County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 18, 2019. See County of Fannin v. Rite Aid of Georgia, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45269-DAP, ECF No. 23. Fannin County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fannin County elected not to do so. Instead, Fannin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fannin County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Fannin County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018. See County of Fannin v. Rite Aid of Georgia, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45269-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Fannin County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Fannin County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fannin County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fannin County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fannin County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Fannin County has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Fannin County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Fannin County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fannin County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fannin County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fannin County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fannin County filed its original complaint on October 3, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Fannin v. Rite Aid of Georgia, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45269-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Fannin County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 3, 2022. Fannin County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fannin County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fannin County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1117. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45270-DAP: Plaintiff Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Wisconsin

Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on January 7, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 17, 2019. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45270-DAP, ECF No. 10. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa elected not to do so. Instead, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has A Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on January 7, 2019. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45270-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on January 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45270-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 7, 2023. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1118. Winona County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45271-DAP: Plaintiff Winona County, Minnesota

Winona County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Winona County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Winona County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Winona County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Winona County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Winona County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Winona County amended its complaint on July 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 17, 2019. See Winona County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45271-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Winona County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Winona County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Winona County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Winona County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Winona County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Winona County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Winona County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Winona County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.19% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Winona County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Winona County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Winona County filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, but waited until September 10, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—almost five and a half years later. See Winona County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45271-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 10, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Winona County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Winona County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Winona County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Winona County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Winona County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Winona County, a municipality in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Winona County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Winona County filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Winona County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45271-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Winona County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Winona County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. 1119. Marion County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45272-DAP: Plaintiff Marion County, Florida

Marion County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Marion County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Marion County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Marion County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Marion County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Marion County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Marion County filed its original complaint on April 3, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on April 17, 2019. *See Marion County, Florida v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Marion County elected not to do so. Instead, Marion County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Marion County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Marion County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.18% market share for Marion County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Marion County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Marion County filed its original complaint on April 3, 2019. *See Marion County, Florida v. Marion County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Marion County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Marion County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on April 3, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Marion County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1120. Miller County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45274-DAP: Plaintiff Miller County, Missouri

Miller County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Miller County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Miller County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Miller County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Miller County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Miller County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.. Moreover, Miller County amended its complaint on July 10, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Miller County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45274-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Miller County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Miller County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Miller County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Miller County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Miller County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Miller County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Miller County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Miller County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Miller County filed its original complaint on April 11, 2019. *See Miller County, Missouri v. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Miller County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Miller County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Page County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Page County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Page County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Page County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Page County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Page County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on September 21, 2018. See Page County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45275-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Co.; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Page County also amended its complaint on July 3, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., ECF No. 80 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Page County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Page County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Page County's complaint, Page County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Page County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Page County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Page County filed its original complaint on September 21, 2018, but waited until July 19, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly six years later. See Page County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45275-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 19, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Page County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Page County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Page County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Page County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Page County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Page County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Page County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Page County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Page County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Page County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Page County's potential claims against them. Page County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Page County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Page County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Page County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Page County filed its original complaint on September 21, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Page County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45275-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Page County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 21, 2022. Page County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Page County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Page County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1122. Hospital Authority of Wayne County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45278-DAP: Plaintiff Wayne County Hospital Authority, Georgia

Wayne County Hospital Authority’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. The Court previously dismissed Wayne County Hospital Authority’s case. Moreover, Wayne County Hospital Authority failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wayne County Hospital Authority also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wayne County Hospital Authority’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wayne County Hospital Authority does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Jurisdiction. This Court previously closed Wayne County Hospital Authority’s case on September 21, 2023. See Hospital Authority of Wayne County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45278-DAP, ECF No. 41. “Following entry of final judgment, a party may not seek to amend their complaint without first moving to alter, set aside or vacate judgment pursuant to either Rule 59 or Rule 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.” In re Ferro Corp., 511 F.3d at 624 (citation omitted). Without such post-judgment relief, the “district court lacks power to grant a motion to amend the complaint” because there is no “live case or controversy before the district court.” Id. (quoting Acevedo-Villalobos, 22 F.3d at 389). Wayne County Hospital Authority has neither moved for post-judgment relief nor met the heightened requirements for reopening a case. See Leisure Caviar, 616 F.3d at 617 (“A claimant who seeks to amend a complaint after losing the case must provide a compelling explanation to the district court for granting the motion.”). Wayne County Hospital Authority has not offered any basis to reopen its case, so its motion for leave to amend must be denied. See id. (affirming denial of leave to amend after judgment, in part, because the plaintiff was previously on notice of the alleged “newly discovered evidence” offered in support of the motion).

Lack of Diligence. Wayne County Hospital Authority was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wayne County Hospital Authority amended its complaint on July 15, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL, as well as on July 15, 2019. See Hospital Authority of Wayne County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45278-DAP, ECF Nos. 25, 26. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wayne County Hospital Authority declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Wayne County Hospital Authority’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wayne County Hospital Authority waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wayne County Hospital Authority’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wayne County Hospital Authority filed its original complaint on April 16, 2019. See Hospital Authority of Wayne County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45278-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wayne County Hospital Authority never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wayne County Hospital Authority's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wayne County Hospital Authority's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wayne County Hospital Authority's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wayne County Hospital Authority therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wayne County Hospital Authority's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wayne County Hospital Authority, a hospital in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wayne County Hospital Authority’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wayne County Hospital Authority filed its original complaint on April 16, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Hospital Authority of Wayne County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45278-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wayne County Hospital Authority knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Wayne County Hospital Authority’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wayne County Hospital Authority’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wayne County Hospital Authority, a hospital in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1123. Town of Warren v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45281-DAP: Plaintiff Warren Town, Rhode Island

Warren Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Warren Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Warren Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs.

Moreover, Warren Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Warren Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Warren Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Warren Town amended its complaint on July 10, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 17, 2019. See Town of Warren v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Warren Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Warren Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Warren Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Warren Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Warren Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Warren Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Warren Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Warren Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Warren Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Warren Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Warren Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.30% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Warren Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Warren Town filed its original complaint on April 2, 2019. See Town of Warren v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45281-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Warren Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). 1124. Town of Scituate v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45282-DAP: Plaintiff Scituate Town, Rhode Island

Scituate Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Scituate Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Scituate Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Scituate Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Scituate Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1125. Jackson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45283-DAP: Plaintiff Jackson County, Florida

Jackson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jackson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jackson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jackson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Jackson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Jackson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Jackson County amended its complaint on July 17, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 18, 2019. See Jackson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45283-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Jackson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Jackson County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Jackson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Jackson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Jackson County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Jackson County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Jackson County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Jackson County filed its original complaint on April 2, 2019. See Jackson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45283-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Jackson County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Jackson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jackson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jackson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jackson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jackson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Jackson County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jackson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jackson County filed its original complaint on April

2, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Jackson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45283-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jackson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Jackson County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Jackson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Jackson County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Jackson County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on April 2, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Jackson County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1126. City of Rome, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45284-DAP: Plaintiff Rome City, New York

Rome City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rome City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rome City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rome City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Rome City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Rome City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rome City amended its complaint on July 3, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 18, 2019. See City of Rome, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45284-DAP, ECF No. 78. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rome City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Rome City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Rome City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rome City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.02% market share for Rome City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rome City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rome City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019. See City of Rome, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45284-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Rome City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Rome City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rome City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rome City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rome City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rome City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rome City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rome City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Rome, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45284-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Rome City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Rome City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Rome City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Rome City, a municipality in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Rome City's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1127. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45286-DAP: Plaintiff Union County, Illinois

Union County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Union County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Union County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Union County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Union County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Union County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Union County first amended its complaint on September 10, 2018. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45286-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Union County amended its complaint again on July 17, 2019. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45286-DAP, ECF No. 48. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Union County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Union County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Union County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Union County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Union County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Union County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Union County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Union County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Union County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Union County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Union County's potential claims against them. Union County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Union County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Union County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Union County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Union County filed its second amended complaint on July 17, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45286-DAP, ECF No. 48. It is therefore indisputable that Union County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Union County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Union County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Union County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1128. City of Greensboro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45289-DAP: Plaintiff Greensboro City, North Carolina

Greensboro City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Greensboro City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Greensboro City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Greensboro City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Greensboro City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Greensboro City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Greensboro City amended its complaint on July 22, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 22, 2019. See City of Greensboro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45289-DAP, ECF No. 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Greensboro City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Greensboro City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Greensboro City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Greensboro City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Greensboro City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Greensboro City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Greensboro City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Greensboro City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Greensboro City filed its original complaint on April 8, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—eight months later. See City of Greensboro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45289-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Greensboro City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Greensboro City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Greensboro City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Greensboro City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Greensboro City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Greensboro City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Greensboro City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Greensboro City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Greensboro City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Greensboro City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Greensboro City’s potential claims against them. Greensboro City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Greensboro City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Greensboro City, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Greensboro City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Greensboro City filed its original complaint on April 8, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Greensboro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45289-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Greensboro City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Greensboro City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Greensboro City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Greensboro City, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1129. Lee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45290-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, North Carolina

Lee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lee County amended its complaint on July 22, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on April 22, 2019. See Lee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45290-DAP, ECF No. 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lee County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lee County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Lee County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Lee County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195

F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lee County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Lee County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lee County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lee County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lee County filed its original complaint on April 8, 2019, but waited until December 16, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—eight months later. See Lee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45290-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 16, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lee County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lee County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lee County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lee County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lee County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lee County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lee County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lee County's potential claims against them. Lee County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lee County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lee County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lee County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lee County filed its original complaint on April 8, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lee County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45290-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lee County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lee County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lee County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1130. City of Gulfport, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45291-DAP: Plaintiff Gulfport City, Mississippi

Gulfport City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gulfport City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gulfport City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gulfport City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Gulfport City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Gulfport City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Gulfport City amended its complaint on October 18, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Gulfport, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45291-DAP, ECF No. 31. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Gulfport City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Gulfport City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Gulfport City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Gulfport City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Gulfport City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Gulfport City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Gulfport City began receiving those services on January 1, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Gulfport City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Gulfport City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Gulfport City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Gulfport City filed its original complaint on April 24, 2019. See City of Gulfport, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45291-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Gulfport City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Gulfport City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Gulfport City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Gulfport City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Gulfport City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Gulfport City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Gulfport City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Gulfport City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Gulfport City filed its original complaint on April 24, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Gulfport, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45291-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Gulfport City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Gulfport City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Gulfport City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Gulfport City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1131. City of Prestonsburg v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45294-DAP: Plaintiff Prestonsburg City, Kentucky

Prestonsburg City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Prestonsburg City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Prestonsburg City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Prestonsburg City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Prestonsburg City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Prestonsburg City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Prestonsburg City amended its complaint on September 18, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Prestonsburg v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45294-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Prestonsburg City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Prestonsburg City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Prestonsburg City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Prestonsburg City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Prestonsburg City's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Prestonsburg City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Prestonsburg City filed its original complaint on April 30, 2019. See City of Prestonsburg v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45294-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Prestonsburg City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Prestonsburg City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Prestonsburg City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Prestonsburg City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Prestonsburg City, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Prestonsburg City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1132. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Watson Laboratories, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45297-DAP: Plaintiff Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, Wisconsin

Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on January 7, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 6, 2019. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Watson Laboratories, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45297-DAP, ECF No. 6. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa elected not to do so. Instead, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline);

Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on January 7, 2019. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Watson Laboratories, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45297-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Wisconsin law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Wisconsin law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Wisconsin, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa filed its original complaint on January 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa v. Watson Laboratories, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45297-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on January 7, 2023. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bad River Band of Lake Superior

Chippewa's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bad River Band of Lake Superior Chippewa, a native tribe in Wisconsin, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1133. City of Brighton v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45298-DAP: Plaintiff Brighton City, Colorado

Brighton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Brighton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Brighton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Brighton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Brighton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Brighton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Brighton City amended its complaint on June 6, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 6, 2019, as well as on December 22, 2020. See City of Brighton v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45298-DAP, ECF Nos. 10, 14. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Brighton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Brighton City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Brighton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Brighton City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Brighton City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Brighton City, a municipality in Colorado, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Brighton City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Brighton City filed its original complaint on April 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Brighton v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45298-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Brighton City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Brighton City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Brighton City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Brighton City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1134. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Bernalillo v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45301-DAP: Plaintiff Bernalillo County, New Mexico

Bernalillo County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bernalillo County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bernalillo County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bernalillo County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bernalillo County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bernalillo County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bernalillo County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 8, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Bernalillo v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45301-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bernalillo County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bernalillo County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Bernalillo County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bernalillo County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Bernalillo County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Bernalillo County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Bernalillo County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bernalillo County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Bernalillo County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bernalillo County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Bernalillo County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Bernalillo County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Bernalillo County began receiving those services on July 1, 2015. See id. Inasmuch as Bernalillo County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Bernalillo County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct nine years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Bernalillo County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bernalillo County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bernalillo County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bernalillo County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bernalillo County filed its original complaint on April 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Bernalillo v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45301-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bernalillo County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Bernalillo County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bernalillo County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bernalillo County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1135. City of Lackawanna, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45303-DAP: Plaintiff Lackawanna City, New York

Lackawanna City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lackawanna City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lackawanna City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lackawanna City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lackawanna City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Lackawanna City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above.

Moreover, Lackawanna City amended its complaint on July 22, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 8, 2019. See City of Lackawanna, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45303-DAP, ECF No. 79. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lackawanna City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lackawanna City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Lackawanna City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lackawanna City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lackawanna City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Lackawanna City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lackawanna City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

support a finding of good cause for Lackawanna City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lackawanna City filed its original complaint on April 15, 2019. See City of Lackawanna, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45303-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lackawanna City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Lackawanna City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lackawanna City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lackawanna City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lackawanna City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lackawanna City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lackawanna City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lackawanna City filed its original complaint on April 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Lackawanna, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45303-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lackawanna City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lackawanna City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lackawanna City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lackawanna City, a municipality in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Lackawanna City's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1136. Meriwether County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45305-DAP: Plaintiff Meriwether County, Georgia

Meriwether County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Meriwether County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Meriwether County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Meriwether County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Meriwether County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Meriwether County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Meriwether County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Meriwether County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45305-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Meriwether County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Meriwether County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Meriwether County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Meriwether County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Meriwether County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Meriwether County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Meriwether County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Meriwether County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2019. See Meriwether County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45305-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Meriwether County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Meriwether County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Meriwether County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Meriwether County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Meriwether County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Meriwether County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Meriwether County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Meriwether County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Meriwether County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Meriwether County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Meriwether County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Meriwether County’s potential claims against them. Meriwether County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Meriwether County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Meriwether County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Meriwether County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Meriwether County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45305-DAP; and Smith v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45306-DAP. Meriwether County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Meriwether County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Meriwether County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Meriwether County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45305-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Meriwether County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Meriwether County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Meriwether County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Meriwether County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1137. Smith v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45306-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Meriwether County, Georgia

Sheriff of Meriwether County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Meriwether County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Meriwether County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Meriwether County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Meriwether County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Meriwether County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Meriwether County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Smith v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45306-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Meriwether County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Meriwether County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Meriwether County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Meriwether County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Meriwether County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.1% market share for Sheriff of Meriwether County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Meriwether County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Meriwether County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2019. See Smith v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45306-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Meriwether County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Meriwether County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Meriwether County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Meriwether County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Meriwether County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Meriwether County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Meriwether County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Meriwether County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Meriwether County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Meriwether County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Meriwether County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Meriwether County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Meriwether County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Meriwether County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Meriwether County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Meriwether County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Meriwether County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45305-DAP; and Smith v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45306-DAP. Sheriff of Meriwether County’s impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff’s claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff’s claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court’s inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Meriwether County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Meriwether County filed its original complaint on May 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Smith v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45306-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Meriwether County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Meriwether County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Meriwether County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Meriwether County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1138. Melton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45307-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Appling County, Georgia

Sheriff of Appling County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Appling County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Appling County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Appling County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Appling County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Appling County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Appling County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Melton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45307-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Appling County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Appling County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Appling County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Appling County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Appling County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Sheriff of Appling County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Appling County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.11% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Appling County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Appling County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2019. See Melton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45307-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Appling County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Appling County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Appling County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Appling County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Appling County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Appling County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Appling County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Appling County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Appling County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Appling County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Appling County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Appling County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Appling County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Appling County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Appling County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Appling County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Appling County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Melton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45307-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Appling County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Appling County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Appling County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Appling County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1139. Talton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45308-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Houston County, Georgia

Sheriff of Houston County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Houston County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Houston County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Houston County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Houston County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Houston County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Houston County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Talton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45308-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Houston County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Houston County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Sheriff of Houston County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Houston County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Houston County filed its original complaint on May 8, 2019. See Talton v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45308-DAP, ECF No. 1. Sheriff of Houston County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Houston County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1140. City of Sanford v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45311-DAP: Plaintiff Sanford City, Maine

Sanford City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sanford City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sanford City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sanford City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sanford City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sanford City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sanford City filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 13, 2019. See City of Sanford v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45311-DAP, ECF No. 40. Sanford City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sanford City elected not to do so. Instead, Sanford City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sanford City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sanford City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sanford City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sanford City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sanford City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sanford City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sanford City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sanford City's potential claims against them. Sanford City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sanford City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sanford City, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Sanford City is a plaintiff in Maine. Sanford City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sanford City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sanford City filed its original complaint on February 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Sanford v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45311-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Sanford City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on February 4, 2023. Sanford City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sanford City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sanford City, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1141. Steverson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45313-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Telfair County, Georgia

Sheriff of Telfair County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Telfair County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Telfair County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Telfair County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Telfair County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Telfair County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Telfair County amended its complaint on August 6, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Steverson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45313-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Telfair County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Telfair County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Telfair County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Telfair County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Sheriff of Telfair County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Sheriff of Telfair County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.08% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Telfair County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Telfair County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019. See Steverson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45313-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Telfair County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Telfair County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Telfair County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Telfair County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Telfair County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Telfair County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Telfair County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Telfair County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Telfair County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Telfair County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff of Telfair County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Telfair County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Telfair County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Telfair County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Telfair County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Telfair County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: City of Rome, et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:18-op-45282-DAP; and Steverson v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45313-DAP. Sheriff of Telfair County's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Telfair County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Telfair County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Steverson v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45313-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Telfair County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Telfair County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Telfair County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Telfair County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1142. Deese v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45314-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Peach County, Georgia

Sheriff of Peach County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Peach County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Peach County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Peach County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Peach County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Peach County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Peach County amended its complaint on August 6, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Deese v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45314-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Peach County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff of Peach County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Peach County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Peach County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Peach County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Peach County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Peach County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Peach County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019. See Deese v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45314-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Peach County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Peach County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Peach County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Peach County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Peach County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff of Peach County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff of Peach County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff of Peach County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff of Peach County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sheriff of Peach County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above.

Sheriff of Peach County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sheriff of Peach County's potential claims against them. Sheriff of Peach County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Peach County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Peach County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. Sheriff of Peach County seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: Peach County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., No. 1:18-op-45579-DAP; and Deese v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., No. 1:19-op-45314-DAP. Sheriff of Peach County's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sheriff of Peach County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sheriff of Peach County filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Deese v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45314-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sheriff of Peach County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sheriff of Peach County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sheriff of Peach County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Peach County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1143. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Catron v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45320-DAP: Plaintiff Catron County, New Mexico

Catron County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Catron County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint.

Catron County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Catron County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Catron County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Catron County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Catron County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 14, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Catron v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45320-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Catron County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Catron County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Catron County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Catron County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Catron County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Catron County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Catron County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Catron County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Catron County filed its original complaint on April 23, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—nearly eight months later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Catron v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45320-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Catron County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Catron County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Catron County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Catron County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Catron County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. 1144. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Cibola v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45321-DAP: Plaintiff Cibola County, New Mexico

Cibola County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cibola County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Cibola County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Cibola County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Cibola County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Under this Court’s orders, Cibola County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. County's potential claims against them. Cibola County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

1145. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Sierra v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45322-DAP: Plaintiff Sierra County, New Mexico

Sierra County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sierra County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sierra County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sierra County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sierra County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sierra County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sierra County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sierra County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sierra County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sierra County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sierra County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sierra County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sierra County filed its original complaint on April 23, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Sierra v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45322-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sierra County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sierra County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sierra County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sierra County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1146. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Socorro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45323-DAP: Plaintiff Socorro County, New Mexico

Socorro County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Socorro County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Socorro County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Socorro County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Socorro County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Socorro County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Socorro County amended its complaint on August 5, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 14, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Socorro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45323-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Socorro County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Socorro County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Socorro County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Socorro County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Socorro County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Socorro County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Socorro County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Socorro County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.17% market share for Socorro County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Socorro County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Socorro County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Socorro County filed its original complaint on April 23,

2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—nearly eight months later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Socorro v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45323-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. 1147. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Valencia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45324-DAP: Plaintiff Valencia County, New Mexico

Valencia County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Valencia County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Valencia County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Valencia County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Valencia County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO

Wilkes Barre Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wilkes Barre Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wilkes Barre Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wilkes Barre Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Wilkes Barre Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wilkes Barre Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wilkes Barre Township amended its complaint on July 30, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 14, 2019. See Wilkes-Barre Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45325-DAP, ECF No. 80. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wilkes Barre Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wilkes Barre Township's deadline to amend was in 2019. Wilkes Barre Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wilkes Barre Township's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.12% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wilkes Barre Township to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wilkes Barre Township filed its original complaint on April 25, 2019. See Wilkes-Barre Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45325-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wilkes Barre Township never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wilkes Barre Township's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wilkes Barre Township's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wilkes Barre Township's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wilkes Barre Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Wilkes Barre Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Wilkes Barre Township's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Wilkes Barre Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Wilkes Barre Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Wilkes Barre Township's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above.

Wilkes Barre Township's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Wilkes Barre Township's potential claims against them. Wilkes Barre Township's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wilkes Barre Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wilkes Barre Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Wilkes Barre Township filed its original complaint on April 25, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Wilkes-Barre Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45325-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wilkes Barre Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Wilkes Barre Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wilkes Barre Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wilkes Barre Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1149. Richland County South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45327-DAP: Plaintiff Richland County, South Carolina

Richland County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Richland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Richland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Richland County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Richland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Richland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Richland County filed its original complaint on April 25, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 14, 2019. See Richland County South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case

No. 1:19-op-45327-DAP, ECF No. 8. Richland County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Richland County elected not to do so. Instead, Richland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Richland County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.01% market share for Richland County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Richland County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Richland County filed its original complaint on April 25, 2019. See Richland County South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45327-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Richland County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Richland County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Richland County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Richland County, a municipality in South Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Richland County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Richland County filed its original complaint on April 25, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Richland County South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45327-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Richland County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Richland County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Richland County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Richland County, a municipality in South Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1150. City of Woonsocket, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45328-DAP: Plaintiff Woonsocket City, Rhode Island

Woonsocket City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Woonsocket City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Woonsocket City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Woonsocket City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Woonsocket City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Woonsocket City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Woonsocket City amended its complaint on August 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 14, 2019. See City of Woonsocket, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45328-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Woonsocket City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Woonsocket City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Woonsocket City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Woonsocket City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Woonsocket City filed its original complaint on April 22, 2019. See City of Woonsocket, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45328-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Woonsocket City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Woonsocket City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Woonsocket City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Woonsocket City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Woonsocket City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Woonsocket City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Woonsocket City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Woonsocket City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit

B), but Woonsocket City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Woonsocket City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Woonsocket City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Woonsocket City's potential claims against them. Woonsocket City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Rhode Island law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Woonsocket City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Rhode Island law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Woonsocket City, a municipality in Rhode Island, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Woonsocket City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Woonsocket City filed its original complaint on April 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Woonsocket, Rhode Island v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45328-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Woonsocket City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Woonsocket City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Woonsocket City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Woonsocket City, a municipality in Rhode Island, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1151. City of West Liberty, Kentucky v. AmerisourceBergen Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45329-DAP: Plaintiff West Liberty City, Kentucky

West Liberty City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. West Liberty City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. West Liberty City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, West Liberty City's motion should be denied due to futility, as West Liberty City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. West Liberty City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, West Liberty City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on May 15, 2019. See City of West Liberty, Kentucky v. AmerisourceBergen Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45329-DAP, ECF No. 1. West Liberty City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, West Liberty City elected not to do so. West Liberty City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. West Liberty City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to West Liberty City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, West Liberty City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

support a finding of good cause for West Liberty City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. West Liberty City filed its original complaint on May 15, 2019. See City of West Liberty, Kentucky v. AmerisourceBergen Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45329-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, West Liberty City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating West Liberty City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of West Liberty City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But West Liberty City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. West Liberty City, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

West Liberty City filed its original complaint on May 15, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See City of West Liberty, Kentucky v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. West Liberty City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1152. Sibley County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45333-DAP: Plaintiff Sibley County, Minnesota

Sibley County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sibley County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sibley County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sibley County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sibley County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sibley County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sibley County amended its complaint on August 14, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 17, 2019. See Sibley County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45333-DAP, ECF No. 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sibley County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sibley County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sibley County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sibley County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sibley County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sibley County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sibley County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F.

App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Sibley County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Sibley County filed its original complaint on May 3, 2019, but waited until March 31, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—more than ten months later. See Sibley County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45333-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: March 31, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sibley County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sibley County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sibley County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sibley County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sibley County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

It is therefore indisputable that Sibley County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sibley County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sibley County, a municipality in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1153. Scotland County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45336-DAP: Plaintiff Scotland County, North Carolina

Scotland County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Scotland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Scotland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Scotland County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Scotland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Scotland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Scotland County amended its complaint on August 19, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 22, 2019. See Scotland County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45336-DAP, ECF No. 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Scotland County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Scotland County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Scotland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Scotland County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Scotland County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Scotland County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Scotland County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Scotland County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Scotland County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Scotland County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Scotland County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Scotland County filed its original complaint on April 8, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—eight months later. See Scotland County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45336-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Scotland County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Scotland County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Scotland County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Scotland County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Scotland County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1154. Sarasota County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45339-DAP: Plaintiff Sarasota County, Florida

Sarasota County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sarasota County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sarasota County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sarasota County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sarasota County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sarasota County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sarasota County amended its complaint on August 22, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2019. See Sarasota County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45339-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sarasota County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sarasota County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sarasota County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sarasota County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sarasota County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sarasota County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sarasota County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sarasota County filed its original complaint on May 6, 2019. See Sarasota County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45339-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sarasota County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sarasota County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sarasota County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sarasota County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sarasota County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sarasota County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sarasota County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sarasota County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sarasota County filed its original complaint on May 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Sarasota County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45339-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sarasota County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sarasota County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sarasota County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Sarasota County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Sarasota County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on May 6, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sarasota County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1155. Guilford County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45340-DAP: Plaintiff Guilford County, North Carolina

Guilford County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Guilford County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Guilford County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Guilford County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Guilford County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Guilford County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Guilford County amended its complaint on August 27, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2019. See Guilford County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45340-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Guilford County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Guilford County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Guilford County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Guilford County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Guilford County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Guilford County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Guilford County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Guilford County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Guilford County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Guilford County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Guilford County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.40% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Guilford County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Guilford County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Guilford County filed its original complaint on May 4, 2019, but waited until December 23, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—more than seven months later. See Guilford County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45340-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 23, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Guilford County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Guilford County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Guilford County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Guilford County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Guilford County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Guilford County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Guilford County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Guilford County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Guilford County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1156. Lafayette County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45341-DAP: Plaintiff Lafayette County, Mississippi

Lafayette County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lafayette County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lafayette County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lafayette County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lafayette County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lafayette County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lafayette County amended its complaint on August 27, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2019. See Lafayette County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45341-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lafayette County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lafayette County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lafayette County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lafayette County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lafayette County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lafayette County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lafayette County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lafayette County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lafayette County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lafayette County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lafayette County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lafayette County's potential claims against them. Lafayette County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lafayette County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

1157. Granville County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45342-DAP: Plaintiff Granville County, North Carolina

Granville County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Granville County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Granville County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Granville County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Granville County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1158. Meeker County, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45343-DAP: Plaintiff Meeker County, Minnesota

Meeker County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Meeker County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Meeker County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Meeker County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Meeker County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Meeker County amended its complaint on August 21, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2019. See Meeker County, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45343-DAP, ECF No. 27. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Meeker County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Meeker County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Meeker County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Meeker County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Meeker County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Meeker County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Meeker County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Meeker County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Meeker County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

a finding of good cause for Meeker County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Meeker County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Meeker County, a municipality in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Meeker County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Meeker County filed its original complaint on May 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Meeker County, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45343-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Meeker County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Meeker County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Meeker County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Meeker County, a municipality in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1159. Roseau County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45344-DAP: Plaintiff Roseau County, Minnesota

Roseau County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Roseau County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Roseau County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Roseau County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Roseau County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Roseau County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Roseau County amended its complaint on August 21, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2019. See Roseau County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45344-DAP, ECF No. 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Roseau County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Roseau County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Roseau County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Roseau County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Roseau County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Roseau County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Roseau County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Roseau County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Roseau County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Roseau County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Roseau County, a municipality in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Roseau County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Roseau County filed its original complaint on May 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Roseau County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45344-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Roseau County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Roseau County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Roseau County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Roseau County, a municipality in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1160. Durham County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45346-DAP: Plaintiff Durham County, North Carolina

Durham County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Durham County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Durham County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Durham County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Durham County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Durham County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Durham County amended its complaint on August 27, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 30, 2019, as well as on July 19, 2021. See Durham County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45346-DAP, ECF Nos. 6, 43. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Durham County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Durham County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Durham County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Durham County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Durham County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Durham County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Durham County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Durham County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Durham County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Durham County to add dispensing claims against

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Durham County filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019. See Durham County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45346-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Durham County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Durham County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Durham County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Durham County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Durham County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Durham County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Durham County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Durham County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1161. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Curry, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45347-DAP: Plaintiff Curry County, New Mexico

Curry County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Curry County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Curry County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Curry County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Curry County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1162. Aroostook Band of Micmacs v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45349-DAP: Plaintiff Aroostook Band of Micmacs, Maine

Aroostook Band of Micmacs' untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Aroostook Band of Micmacs failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Aroostook Band of Micmacs also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Aroostook Band of Micmacs' motion should be denied due to futility, as Aroostook Band of Micmacs does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Aroostook Band of Micmacs was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Aroostook Band of Micmacs amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Aroostook Band of Micmacs v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45349-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Aroostook Band of Micmacs declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Aroostook Band of Micmacs' deadline to amend was in 2019. Aroostook Band of Micmacs waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Aroostook Band of Micmacs' lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Aroostook Band of Micmacs cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Aroostook Band of Micmacs, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Aroostook Band of Micmacs fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Aroostook Band of Micmacs to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Aroostook Band of Micmacs filed its original complaint on May 28, 2019. See Aroostook Band of Micmacs v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45349-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Aroostook Band of Micmacs never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Aroostook Band of Micmacs' case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Aroostook Band of Micmacs' document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Aroostook Band of Micmacs' disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Aroostook Band of Micmacs therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Aroostook Band of Micmacs' delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Aroostook Band of Micmacs, a native tribe in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Aroostook Band of Micmacs is a plaintiff in Maine. Aroostook Band of Micmacs' request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Aroostook Band of Micmacs' proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Aroostook Band of Micmacs filed its original complaint on May 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Aroostook Band of Micmacs v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45349-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Aroostook Band of Micmacs knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Aroostook Band of Micmacs' RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Aroostook Band of Micmacs' request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Aroostook Band of Micmacs, a native tribe in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1163. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45350-DAP: Plaintiff Lower Brule Sioux Tribe, South Dakota

Lower Brule Sioux Tribe’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lower Brule Sioux Tribe’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lower Brule Sioux Tribe does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lower Brule Sioux Tribe amended its complaint on August 13, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Lower Brule Sioux Tribe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45350-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lower Brule Sioux Tribe declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Lower Brule Sioux Tribe’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe filed its original complaint on May 28, 2019. See Lower Brule Sioux Tribe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45350-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lower Brule Sioux Tribe never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lower Brule Sioux Tribe therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under South Dakota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under South Dakota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe, a native tribe in South Dakota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe filed its original complaint on May 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lower Brule Sioux Tribe v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45350-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lower Brule Sioux Tribe knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lower Brule Sioux Tribe, a native tribe in South Dakota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1164. Board of County Commissioners of County of Tulsa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45352-DAP: Plaintiff Tulsa County, Oklahoma

Tulsa County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tulsa County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tulsa County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tulsa County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Tulsa County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tulsa County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tulsa County first amended its complaint on April 11, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of County of Tulsa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45352-DAP, ECF No. 2-13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tulsa County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Tulsa County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Tulsa County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tulsa County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Tulsa County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Tulsa County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Tulsa County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Tulsa County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Tulsa County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tulsa County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Tulsa County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tulsa County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Tulsa County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Tulsa County filed its original complaint on March 18, 2019, but waited until June 22, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—more than a year later. See Board of County Commissioners of County of Tulsa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45352-DAP, ECF No. 2-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: June 22, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Tulsa County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Tulsa County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Tulsa County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Tulsa County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Tulsa County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Tulsa County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Tulsa County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Tulsa County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Tulsa County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Tulsa County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Tulsa County's potential claims against them. Tulsa County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Tulsa County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Tulsa County, a municipality in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Tulsa County is a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Tulsa County’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma’s public nuisance law does not extend to “the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids.” Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tulsa County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tulsa County filed its original complaint on March 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Board of County Commissioners of County of Tulsa v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45352-DAP, ECF No. 2-2. It is therefore indisputable that Tulsa County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Tulsa County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tulsa County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tulsa County, a municipality in Oklahoma, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1165. Board of County Commissioners for San Miguel County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45354-DAP: Plaintiff San Miguel County, New Mexico

San Miguel County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Miguel County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Miguel County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Miguel County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as San Miguel County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Miguel County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Miguel County filed its original complaint on December 28, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 31, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners for San Miguel County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45354-DAP, ECF No. 13. San Miguel County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Miguel County elected not to do so.

Instead, San Miguel County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Miguel County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But San Miguel County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

It is therefore indisputable that San Miguel County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five and a half years before seeking leave to amend. San Miguel County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. 1166. Fairview Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45355-DAP: Plaintiff Fairview Township, Pennsylvania

Fairview Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fairview Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fairview Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fairview Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fairview Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fairview Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fairview Township amended its complaint on August 27, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 31, 2019. See Fairview Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45355-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fairview Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Fairview Township's deadline to amend was in 2019. Fairview Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fairview Township's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Fairview Township, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Fairview Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Fairview Township’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

But Fairview Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fairview Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fairview Township's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fairview Township filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Fairview Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45355-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Fairview Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Fairview Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fairview Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fairview Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1167. Orange County Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45356-DAP: Plaintiff Orange County, Indiana

Orange County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Orange County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Orange County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Orange County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Orange County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Orange County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover,

Orange County filed its original complaint on May 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on May 31, 2019. See Orange County Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45356-DAP, ECF No. 7. Orange County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Orange County elected not to do so. Instead, Orange County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Orange County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Orange County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.48% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Orange County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Orange County filed its original complaint on May 13, 2019, but waited until August 29, 2019 to implement a litigation hold. See Orange County Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45356-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 29, 2019). Orange County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Orange County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Orange County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Orange County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Orange County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Orange County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Orange County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Orange County's potential claims against them. Orange County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Indiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Orange County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Indiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Orange County, a municipality in Indiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Orange County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Orange County filed its original complaint on May 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Orange County Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45356-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Orange County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Orange County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Orange County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Orange County, a municipality in Indiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1168. White Earth Nation v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45357-DAP: Plaintiff White Earth Nation, Minnesota

White Earth Nation's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. White Earth Nation failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. White Earth Nation also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, White Earth Nation's motion should be denied due to futility, as White Earth Nation does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. White Earth Nation was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, White Earth Nation amended its complaint on August 13, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on May 31, 2019. See White Earth Nation v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45357-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, White Earth Nation declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. White Earth Nation's deadline to amend was in 2019. White Earth Nation waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. White Earth Nation's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. White Earth Nation cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. White Earth Nation, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. White Earth Nation fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. White Earth Nation filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019. See White Earth Nation v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45357-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, White Earth Nation never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating White Earth Nation’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of White Earth Nation’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by White Earth Nation’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and White Earth Nation therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But White Earth Nation’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. White Earth Nation, a native tribe in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for White Earth Nation's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. White Earth Nation filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See White Earth Nation v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. White Earth Nation, a native tribe in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1169. William C. Massee, Jr. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45361-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff Of Baldwin County, Georgia

Sheriff Of Baldwin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff Of Baldwin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff Of Baldwin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff Of Baldwin County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff Of Baldwin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff Of Baldwin County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff Of Baldwin County amended its complaint on August 23, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See William C. Massee, Jr. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45361-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff Of Baldwin County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheriff Of Baldwin County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff Of Baldwin County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff Of Baldwin County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

(0.07% market share for Sheriff Of Baldwin County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff Of Baldwin County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff Of Baldwin County filed its original complaint on June 4, 2019. See William C. Massee, Jr. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45361-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff Of Baldwin County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sheriff Of Baldwin County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sheriff Of Baldwin County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sheriff Of Baldwin County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sheriff Of Baldwin County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Sheriff Of Baldwin County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sheriff Of Baldwin County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Sheriff Of Baldwin County’s potential claims against them. Sheriff Of Baldwin County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff Of Baldwin County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Sheriff Of Baldwin County filed its original complaint on June 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See William C. Massee, Jr. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45361-DAP, ECF No. 1. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff Of Baldwin County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1170. Snohomish County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45370-DAP: Plaintiff Snohomish County, Washington

Snohomish County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Snohomish County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Snohomish County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Snohomish County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Snohomish County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Snohomish County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Snohomish County amended its complaint on September 4, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 7, 2019. See Snohomish County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45370-DAP, ECF No. 43. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Snohomish County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Snohomish County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Snohomish County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Snohomish County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Snohomish County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Snohomish County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Snohomish County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Snohomish County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.34% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Snohomish County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Snohomish County filed its original complaint on January 28, 2019. See Snohomish County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45370-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Snohomish County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Snohomish County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Snohomish County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Snohomish County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Snohomish County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Washington law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Snohomish County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Washington law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Snohomish County, a municipality in Washington, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Snohomish County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Snohomish County filed its amended complaint on September 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Snohomish County v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45370-DAP, ECF No. 43. It is therefore indisputable that Snohomish County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. Snohomish County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Snohomish County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Washington, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Snohomish County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Snohomish County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on January 28, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Snohomish County, a municipality in Washington, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1171. Boone County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45375-DAP: Plaintiff Boone County, Missouri

Boone County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Boone County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Boone County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Boone County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Boone County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Boone County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Boone County amended its complaint on September 4, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Boone County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45375-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Boone County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Boone County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Boone County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Boone County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Boone County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Boone County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Boone County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Boone County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.15% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Boone County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Boone County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Boone County filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—eighteen months later. See Boone County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45375-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Boone County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Boone County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Boone County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Boone County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Boone County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Boone County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Boone County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Boone County filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Boone County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45375-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Boone County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Boone County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Boone County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Boone County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1172. Callaway County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45378-DAP: Plaintiff Callaway County, Missouri

Callaway County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Callaway County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Callaway County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Callaway County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Callaway County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Callaway County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Callaway County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.43% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Callaway County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Callaway County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Callaway County filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, but waited until September 27, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Callaway County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45378-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 27, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. 1173. Wright County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45383-DAP: Plaintiff Wright County, Missouri

Wright County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wright County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wright County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wright County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wright County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1174. Douglas County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45386-DAP: Plaintiff Douglas County, Missouri

Douglas County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Douglas County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Douglas County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Douglas County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Douglas County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Douglas County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Douglas County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Douglas County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Douglas County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Douglas County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1175. Shannon County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45401-DAP: Plaintiff Shannon County, Missouri

Shannon County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Shannon County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Shannon County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Shannon County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Shannon County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Shannon County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Shannon County amended its complaint on September 5, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Shannon County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45401-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Shannon County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Shannon County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Shannon County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Shannon County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Shannon County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Shannon County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Shannon County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

too low to support a finding of good cause for Shannon County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Shannon County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019. See Shannon County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45401-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Shannon County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Shannon County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Shannon County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Shannon County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Shannon County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Shannon County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Shannon County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Shannon County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Shannon County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Shannon County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45401-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Shannon County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Shannon County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Shannon County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Shannon County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1176. Gooding County, Idaho et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45404-DAP: Plaintiff Gooding County, Idaho

Gooding County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Gooding County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Gooding County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Gooding County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Gooding County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Gooding County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Gooding County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 7, 2019. See Gooding County, Idaho et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45404-DAP, ECF No. 1. Gooding County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Gooding County elected not to do so. Gooding County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Gooding County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Gooding County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Gooding County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Gooding County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Gooding County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.19% market share for Gooding County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gooding County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Gooding County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Gooding County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Gooding County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Gooding County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, but waited until February 8, 2021 to implement a litigation hold—more than a year and a half later. See Gooding County, Idaho et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45404-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 8, 2021). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Gooding County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Gooding County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Gooding County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Gooding County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Gooding County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Gooding County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Gooding County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Gooding County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Gooding County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Gooding County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Gooding County’s potential claims against them. Gooding County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Idaho law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Gooding County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Idaho law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Gooding County, a municipality in Idaho, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Gooding County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Gooding County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Gooding County, Idaho et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45404-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Gooding County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 7, 2023. Gooding County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Gooding County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Gooding County, a municipality in Idaho, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1177. Knox County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45406-DAP: Plaintiff Knox County, Missouri

Knox County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Knox County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Knox County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Knox County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Knox County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Knox County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Knox County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1178. Schuyler County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45408-DAP: Plaintiff Schuyler County, Missouri

Schuyler County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Schuyler County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Schuyler County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Schuyler County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Schuyler County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Unlike many other plaintiffs, Schuyler County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Schuyler County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Schuyler County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Schuyler County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

It is therefore indisputable that Schuyler County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Schuyler County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Schuyler County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Schuyler County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1179. Randolph County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45409-DAP: Plaintiff Randolph County, Missouri

Randolph County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Randolph County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Randolph County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Randolph County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Randolph County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Randolph County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Randolph County amended its complaint on September 5, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Randolph County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45409-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Randolph County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Randolph County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Randolph County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Randolph County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Randolph County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Randolph County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Randolph County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Randolph County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Randolph County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Randolph County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Randolph County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Randolph County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Randolph County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Randolph County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Randolph County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Randolph County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Randolph County’s potential claims against them. Randolph County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Randolph County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Randolph County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Randolph County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Randolph County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Randolph County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45409-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Randolph County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Randolph County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Randolph County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Randolph County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1180. City of Seven Hills, Ohio v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45413-DAP: Plaintiff Seven Hills City, Ohio

Seven Hills City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Seven Hills City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Seven Hills City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Seven Hills City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Seven Hills City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Seven Hills City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Seven Hills City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 10, 2019. See City of Seven Hills, Ohio v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45413-DAP, ECF No. 1. Seven Hills City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Seven Hills City elected not to do so. Seven Hills City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Seven Hills City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Furthermore, in 2023, Seven Hills City filed a separate complaint in this MDL asserting new claims for public nuisance and negligence against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company, n/k/a Evernorth Health, Inc.; Merck-Medco, n/k/a Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; Medco Health Solutions, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; OptumRx, Inc.; and other defendants. See Cuyahoga County et al. v. Mylan Pharms., Inc. et al., No. 1:23-op-45003 (N.D. Ohio), ECF No. 1. Seven Hills City offers no good cause for its failure to bring its proposed claims against all PBMs in the 2023 case, which is still pending. In addition, Seven Hills City’s improper claim-splitting between these two separate cases in the MDL should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App’x at 260–63 (affirming dismissal for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were "duplicative of and improperly split" from an earlier-filed case).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Seven Hills City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Seven Hills City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Seven Hills City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Seven Hills City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Seven Hills City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Seven Hills City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Seven Hills City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Seven Hills City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Seven Hills City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Seven Hills City’s potential claims against them. Seven Hills City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Seven Hills City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Seven Hills City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Seven Hills City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Seven Hills City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Seven Hills City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Seven Hills City filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Seven Hills, Ohio v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45413-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Seven Hills City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Seven Hills City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Seven Hills City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1181. Pettis County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45416-DAP: Plaintiff Pettis County, Missouri

Pettis County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pettis County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pettis County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pettis County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Pettis County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1182. Covington County, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45417-DAP: Plaintiff Covington County, Mississippi

Covington County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Covington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Covington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Covington County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Covington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

It is therefore indisputable that Covington County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Covington County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Covington County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Covington County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1183. Forsyth County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45420-DAP: Plaintiff Forsyth County, Georgia

Forsyth County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Forsyth County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Forsyth County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Forsyth County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Forsyth County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Forsyth County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Forsyth County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 10, 2019. See Forsyth County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45420-DAP, ECF No. 1. Forsyth County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Forsyth County elected not to do so. Forsyth County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Forsyth County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Forsyth County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Forsyth County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Forsyth County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Forsyth County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.26% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Forsyth County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Forsyth County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Forsyth County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Forsyth County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Forsyth County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Forsyth County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Forsyth County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Forsyth County's potential claims against them. Forsyth County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Forsyth County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Forsyth County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Filed a Separate PBM Case. Forsyth County previously filed an opioid case outside the MDL against the PBMs on March 21, 2023. See City of Atlanta, GA et al. v. Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc., et al., Case No. 1:23-cv-01193-JPB, ECF No. 1 (N.D. Ga.). Forsyth County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 147, 148, 150, 151. By suing the PBMs outside the MDL in 2023, Forsyth County shows that it possessed facts to assert claims against the PBMs before it moved to amend in the MDL, precluding a showing of good cause here. See Profitt, 2024 WL 3622448, at *4 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff previously possessed documents showing underlying factual basis for proposed claim).

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Forsyth County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Forsyth County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Forsyth County, Georgia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45420-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Forsyth County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Forsyth County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Forsyth County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Forsyth County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1184. Walton County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45423-DAP: Plaintiff Walton County, Florida

Walton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Walton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Walton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Walton County's motion should be denied due to futility, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Walton County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Walton County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 10, 2019. See Walton County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45423-DAP, ECF No. 1. Walton County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Walton County elected not to do so. Walton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Walton County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims units shipped to Walton County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.29% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Walton County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Walton County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Walton County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Walton County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Walton County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Walton County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Walton County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Walton County's potential claims against them. Walton County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Walton County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Walton County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Mylan Pharmaceuticals, Inc., et al.*, Case No. 1:23-cv-01193-JPB, ECF No. 1 (N.D. Ga.). Walton County also voluntarily dismissed its claims against the PBMs in that case. Id., ECF Nos. 147, 148, 150, 151. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Walton County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Walton County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Walton County, Florida v. Walton County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Walton County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Walton County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Walton County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 10, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Walton County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1185. City of Saint Paul, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45424-DAP: Plaintiff St. Paul City, Minnesota

St. Paul City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Paul City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Paul City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Paul City's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Paul City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Paul City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Paul City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 10, 2019. See City of Saint Paul, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45424-DAP, ECF No. 1. St. Paul City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Paul City elected not to do so. St. Paul City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Paul City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. St. Paul City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. St. Paul City—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. St. Paul City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to St. Paul City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for St. Paul City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Paul City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to St. Paul City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.15% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Paul City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Paul City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. St. Paul City filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, but waited until August 27, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—over one year later. See City of Saint Paul, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45424-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 27, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating St. Paul City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Paul City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by St.

Paul City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and St. Paul City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, St. Paul City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to St. Paul City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified St. Paul City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but St. Paul City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, St. Paul City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. St. Paul City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against St. Paul City's potential claims against them. St. Paul City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Minnesota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. Paul City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Minnesota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. Paul City, a municipality in Minnesota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. Paul City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. Paul City filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Saint Paul, Minnesota v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45424-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that St. Paul City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. St. Paul City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. St. Paul City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Paul City, a municipality in Minnesota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1186. Maverick County, Texas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45426-DAP: Plaintiff Maverick County, Texas

Maverick County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Maverick County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Maverick County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Maverick County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Maverick County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Maverick County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Maverick County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 10, 2019. See Maverick County, Texas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45426-DAP, ECF No. 1. Maverick County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Maverick County elected not to do so. Maverick County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Maverick County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Maverick County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Maverick County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Maverick County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Maverick County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Maverick County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Maverick County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

support a finding of good cause for Maverick County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Maverick County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Maverick County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Maverick County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Maverick County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Maverick County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Maverick County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Maverick County's potential claims against them. Maverick County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Texas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Maverick County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Texas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Maverick County, a municipality in Texas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Maverick County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Maverick County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Maverick County, Texas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45426-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Maverick County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Maverick County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Maverick County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Maverick County, a municipality in Texas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1187. Township of Saddle Brook, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45431-DAP: Plaintiff Saddle Brook Township, New Jersey

Saddle Brook Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Saddle Brook Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Saddle Brook Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Saddle Brook Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Saddle Brook Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Saddle Brook Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Saddle Brook Township filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 10, 2019. See Township of Saddle Brook, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45431-DAP, ECF No. 1. Saddle Brook Township could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Saddle Brook Township elected not to do so. Saddle Brook Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Saddle Brook Township's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Saddle Brook Township cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Saddle Brook Township—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Saddle Brook Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Saddle Brook Township’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.004% market share for Saddle Brook Township). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Saddle Brook Township to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Saddle Brook Township filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019. See Township of Saddle Brook, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45431-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Saddle Brook Township never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Saddle Brook Township’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Saddle Brook Township’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Saddle Brook Township’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Saddle Brook Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Saddle Brook Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Saddle Brook Township’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Saddle Brook Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Saddle Brook Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Saddle Brook Township’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Saddle Brook Township’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Saddle Brook Township’s potential claims against them. Saddle Brook Township’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017

WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Saddle Brook Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Saddle Brook Township, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Saddle Brook Township's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Saddle Brook Township filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Township of Saddle Brook, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45431-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Saddle Brook Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Saddle Brook Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Saddle Brook Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Saddle Brook Township, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1188. County of Berkeley, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45436-DAP: Plaintiff Berkeley County, South Carolina

Berkeley County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Berkeley County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Berkeley County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Berkeley County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Berkeley County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Berkeley County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Berkeley County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 12, 2019. See County of Berkeley, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45436-DAP, ECF No. 1. Berkeley County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Berkeley County elected not to do so. Berkeley County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Berkeley County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under South Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Berkeley County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under South Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Failure to State a Claim. Berkeley County, a municipality in South Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Berkeley County, a municipality in South Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1189. County of Jefferson, NY v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45437-DAP: Plaintiff Jefferson County, New York

Jefferson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Jefferson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Jefferson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Jefferson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Jefferson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Jefferson County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on June 12, 2019. See County of Jefferson, NY v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45437-DAP, ECF No. 1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Holding Company; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx Inc.). Jefferson County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2019, but elected not to do so. See Section II.A.1, above. And while Jefferson County in 2023 secured leave from this Court to move to amend its complaint to add allegations against the PBMs, it failed to take advantage of that leave by ever actually filing a complaint. See Jan. 25, 2023 Order, County of Jefferson, NY v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45437-DAP. Now, Jefferson County again seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to add them before. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Jefferson County's complaint, Jefferson County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A, above. Jefferson County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Jefferson County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Jefferson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Jefferson County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.15% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Jefferson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Jefferson County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019, but waited until August 9, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five years later. See County of Jefferson, NY v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45437-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 9, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Jefferson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Jefferson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Jefferson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Jefferson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Jefferson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Jefferson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Jefferson County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019, alleging a RICO claim against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc. See County of Jefferson, NY v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., 1:19-op-45437-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Jefferson County knew of its injury and the factual basis for its alleged RICO claim against the PBMs, at the very latest, the day it filed that complaint, five years before seeking leave to amend. Jefferson County’s proposed amended RICO claim against the additional PBMs it did not previously name is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of the other elements of a claim”) (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555); see Section III.B.4, above. Jefferson County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

1190. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45438-DAP: Plaintiff Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana, Louisiana

Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana's motion should be denied due to futility, as Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45438-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana's deadline to amend was in 2019. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information

[she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45438-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Louisiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Louisiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana, a native tribe in Louisiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana et al. v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45438-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Louisiana, public-nuisance claims are subject to an one-year limitations period. Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Coshatta Tribe of Louisiana sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 13, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Coushatta Tribe of Louisiana, a native tribe in Louisiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1191. Johnson County, Kansas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45443-DAP: Plaintiff Johnson County, Kansas

Johnson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Johnson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Johnson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Johnson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Johnson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Johnson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Johnson County filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 13, 2019. See Johnson County, Kansas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45443-DAP, ECF No. 1. Johnson County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Johnson County elected not to do so. Johnson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Johnson County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Johnson County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Napoli Shkolnik, PLLC—that have been bringing claims against the PBMs since 2019. Johnson County—through its counsel—was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Johnson County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Johnson County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Johnson County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period.

The PBMs notified Johnson County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Johnson County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Johnson County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Johnson County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Johnson County’s potential claims against them. Johnson County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kansas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Johnson County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kansas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Johnson County, a municipality in Kansas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Johnson County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Johnson County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See Johnson County, Kansas v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45443-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Johnson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Johnson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Johnson County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Johnson County, a municipality in Kansas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1192. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45460-DAP: Plaintiff Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma, Oklahoma

Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma's motion should be denied due to futility, as Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, Nits proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45460-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45460-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma, a native tribe in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma is a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma's public nuisance law does not extend to "the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids." Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45460-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Quapaw Tribe of Oklahoma, a native tribe in Oklahoma, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1193. City of Canton et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45462-DAP: Plaintiff Canton Town, North Carolina

Canton Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Canton Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Canton Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Canton Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Canton Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Canton Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Canton Town amended its complaint on August 27, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Canton et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45462-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Canton Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Canton Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Canton Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs.

Canton Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Canton Town filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Canton et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45462-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Canton Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Canton Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Canton Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Canton Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Canton Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend

1194. City of Canton et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45462-DAP: Plaintiff Chatham County, North Carolina

Chatham County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chatham County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chatham County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chatham County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chatham County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chatham County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Chatham County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. *See City of Canton et al. v. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chatham County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1195. City of Tupelo, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45491-DAP: Plaintiff Tupelo City, Mississippi

Tupelo City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tupelo City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tupelo City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tupelo City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Tupelo City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Tupelo City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Tupelo City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on June 14, 2019. See City of Tupelo, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45491-DAP, ECF No. 1. Tupelo City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Tupelo City elected not to do so. Tupelo City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Tupelo City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Tupelo City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Tupelo City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Tupelo City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Tupelo City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Tupelo, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45491-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Tupelo City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Tupelo City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Tupelo City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Tupelo City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Tupelo City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Tupelo City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Tupelo City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Tupelo City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Tupelo City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Tupelo City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Tupelo City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Tupelo City’s potential claims against them. Tupelo City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Tupelo City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Tupelo City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Tupelo City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Tupelo City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Tupelo, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45491-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Tupelo City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Tupelo City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Tupelo City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Tupelo City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1196. City of Inez, KY v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45499-DAP: Plaintiff Inez City, Kentucky

Inez City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Inez City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Inez City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Inez City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Inez City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Inez City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Inez City amended its complaint on September 18, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Inez, KY v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45499-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Inez City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Inez City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Inez City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Inez City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Inez City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Inez City cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Inez City filed its original complaint on June 17, 2019. See City of Inez, KY v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45499-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Inez City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). But Inez City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Inez City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1197. County of Curry v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45512-DAP: Plaintiff Curry County, Oregon

Curry County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Curry County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Curry County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Curry County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Curry County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Curry County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Curry County amended its complaint on September 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2019. See County of Curry v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45512-DAP, ECF No. 20. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Curry County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Curry County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Curry County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Curry County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Curry County filed its original complaint on May 24, 2019. See County of Curry v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45512-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Curry County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Curry County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Curry County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oregon law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Curry County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oregon law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Curry County, a municipality in Oregon, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Curry County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Curry County filed its original complaint on May 24, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Curry v. Purdue Pharma, LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45512-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Curry County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 24, 2023. Curry County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Curry County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Curry County, a municipality in Oregon, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1198. Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lincoln, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45513-DAP: Plaintiff Lincoln County, New Mexico

Lincoln County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lincoln County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lincoln County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lincoln County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lincoln County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lincoln County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lincoln County amended its complaint on September 16, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 18, 2019. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lincoln, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45513-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lincoln County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lincoln County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lincoln County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lincoln County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Lincoln County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Lincoln County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Lincoln County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Lincoln County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Lincoln County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lincoln County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lincoln County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lincoln County filed its original complaint on May 20, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—nearly seven months later. See Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lincoln, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45513-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lincoln County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lincoln County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lincoln County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lincoln County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Mexico law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lincoln County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Mexico law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lincoln County, a municipality in New Mexico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lincoln County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lincoln County filed its original complaint on May 20, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

Board of County Commissioners of the County of Lincoln, New Mexico v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al, Case No. 1:19-op-45513-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lincoln County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lincoln County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lincoln County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lincoln County, a municipality in New Mexico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1199. City of Long Beach, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45517-DAP: Plaintiff Long Beach City, Mississippi

Long Beach City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Long Beach City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Long Beach City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Long Beach City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Long Beach City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Long Beach City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Long Beach City amended its complaint on October 29, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Long Beach, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45517-DAP, ECF No. 43. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Long Beach City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Long Beach City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Long Beach City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Long Beach City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Long Beach City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Long Beach City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Long Beach City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

support a finding of good cause for Long Beach City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Long Beach City filed its original complaint on June 18, 2019. See City of Long Beach, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45517-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Long Beach City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Long Beach City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Long Beach City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Long Beach City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Long Beach City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Long Beach City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Long Beach City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Long Beach City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Long Beach City filed its original complaint on June 18, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Long Beach, Mississippi v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45517-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Long Beach City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Long Beach City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Long Beach City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Long Beach City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1200. City of Richmond v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45546-DAP: Plaintiff Richmond City, Virginia

Richmond City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Richmond City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Richmond City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Richmond City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Richmond City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Richmond City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Richmond City amended its complaint on June 3, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 21, 2019, as well as on September 19, 2019. See City of Richmond v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45546-DAP, ECF Nos. 3, 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Richmond City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Richmond City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Richmond City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Richmond City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Richmond City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Richmond City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Richmond City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See,

e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Richmond City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Richmond City filed its original complaint on May 29, 2019, but waited until January 30, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—eight months later. See City of Richmond v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45546-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: January 30, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Richmond City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Richmond City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Richmond City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Richmond City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Richmond City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Richmond City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Richmond City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Richmond City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1201. Pearl River County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45548-DAP: Plaintiff Pearl River County, Mississippi

Pearl River County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pearl River County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pearl River County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pearl River County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pearl River County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Pearl River County amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 24, 2019. See Pearl River County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug

Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45548-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pearl River County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pearl River County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pearl River County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pearl River County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Pearl River County filed its original complaint on June 1, 2019. See Pearl River County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45548-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pearl River County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. 1202. City of Amory, Mississippi v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45549-DAP: Plaintiff Amory City, Mississippi

Amory City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Amory City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. 1203. Mitchell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45550-DAP: Plaintiff Mitchell County, North Carolina

Mitchell County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Mitchell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Mitchell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Mitchell County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Mitchell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Mitchell County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Mitchell County filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, but waited until September 10, 2019 to implement a litigation hold.

See Mitchell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45550-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 10, 2019). Mitchell County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Mitchell County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Mitchell County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Mitchell County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Mitchell County filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Mitchell County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45550-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Mitchell County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend.

Mitchell County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Mitchell County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Mitchell County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1204. DeSoto County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45551-DAP: Plaintiff Desoto County, Mississippi

Desoto County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Desoto County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Desoto County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Desoto County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Desoto County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Desoto County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Desoto County amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 24, 2019. See DeSoto County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45551-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Desoto County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Desoto County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Desoto County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Desoto County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Desoto County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Desoto County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Desoto County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Desoto County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Desoto County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Desoto County filed its original complaint on June 3, 2019, but waited until December 17, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See DeSoto County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45551-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 17, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Desoto County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Desoto County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Desoto County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Desoto County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Desoto County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Desoto County, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Desoto County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Desoto County filed its original complaint on June 3, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See DeSoto County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45551-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Desoto County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 3, 2023. Desoto County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Desoto County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Desoto County, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1205. Leflore County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45552-DAP: Plaintiff Leflore County, Mississippi

Leflore County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leflore County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leflore County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leflore County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Leflore County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Leflore County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Leflore County filed its original complaint on June 3, 2019. See Leflore County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45552-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Leflore County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Leflore County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Leflore County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 1206. City of South Sioux City, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45553-DAP: Plaintiff South Sioux City, Nebraska

South Sioux City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. South Sioux City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. South Sioux City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, South Sioux City's motion should be denied due to futility, as South Sioux City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. South Sioux City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, South Sioux City amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 24, 2019. See City of South Sioux City, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45553-DAP, ECF No. 13. Unlike many other plaintiffs, South Sioux City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. South Sioux City's deadline to amend was in 2019. South Sioux City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. South Sioux City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

too low to support a finding of good cause for South Sioux City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. South Sioux City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. South Sioux City filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, but waited until December 19, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See City of South Sioux City, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45553-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 19, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating South Sioux City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of South Sioux City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by South Sioux City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and South Sioux City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, South Sioux City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to South Sioux City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified South Sioux City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but South Sioux City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, South Sioux City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. South Sioux City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against South Sioux City’s potential claims against them. South Sioux City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Nebraska law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But South Sioux City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Nebraska law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. South Sioux City, a municipality in Nebraska, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for South Sioux City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. South Sioux City filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of South Sioux City, Nebraska v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45553-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that South Sioux City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. South Sioux City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. South Sioux City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Nebraska, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. South Sioux City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because South Sioux City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 5, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. South Sioux City, a municipality in Nebraska, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1207. Town of Portsmouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45554-DAP: Plaintiff Portsmouth Town, Rhode Island

Portsmouth Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Portsmouth Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Portsmouth Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Portsmouth Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Portsmouth Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Portsmouth Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Portsmouth Town amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 24, 2019. See Town of Portsmouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45554-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Portsmouth Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Portsmouth Town's deadline to amend was in 2019. Portsmouth Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Portsmouth Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704

F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Portsmouth Town cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Portsmouth Town, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Portsmouth Town fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to Portsmouth Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Portsmouth Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Portsmouth Town violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Portsmouth Town filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See Town of Portsmouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45554-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Portsmouth Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Portsmouth Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Portsmouth Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Portsmouth Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Rhode Island law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Portsmouth Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Rhode Island law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Portsmouth Town, a municipality in Rhode Island, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Portsmouth Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Portsmouth Town filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Portsmouth v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45554-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Portsmouth Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Portsmouth Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Portsmouth Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Portsmouth Town, a municipality in Rhode Island, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1208. County of Northumberland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45555-DAP: Plaintiff Northumberland County, Pennsylvania

Northumberland County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northumberland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northumberland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northumberland County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Northumberland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Northumberland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Northumberland County amended its complaint on September 3, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 24, 2019. See County of Northumberland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45555-DAP, ECF No. 92. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Northumberland County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Northumberland County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Northumberland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Northumberland County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Northumberland County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Northumberland County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Northumberland County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Northumberland County filed its original complaint on June 3, 2019. See County of Northumberland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45555-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Northumberland County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Northumberland County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Northumberland County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Northumberland County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Northumberland County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Northumberland County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Northumberland County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Northumberland County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Northumberland County filed its original complaint on June 3, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Northumberland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45555-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Northumberland County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Northumberland County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Northumberland County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Northumberland County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1209. Bladen County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45557-DAP: Plaintiff Bladen County, North Carolina

Bladen County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bladen County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bladen County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bladen County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bladen County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bladen County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bladen County amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 24, 2019. See Bladen County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45557-DAP, ECF No. 10. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bladen County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bladen County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Bladen County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bladen County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Bladen County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor,

P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Bladen County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Bladen County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Bladen County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Bladen County filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, but waited until September 25, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five years and three months later. See Bladen County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45557-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 25, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Bladen County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bladen County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bladen County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bladen County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bladen County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bladen County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bladen County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bladen County filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bladen County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45557-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bladen County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Bladen County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bladen County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bladen County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1210. City of Paintsville, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45559-DAP: Plaintiff Paintsville City, Kentucky

Paintsville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Paintsville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Paintsville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Paintsville City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Paintsville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Paintsville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Paintsville City amended its complaint on September 18, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Paintsville, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45559-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Paintsville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Paintsville City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Paintsville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Paintsville City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Paintsville City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Paintsville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Paintsville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Paintsville City filed its original complaint on June 24, 2019. See City of Paintsville, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45559-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Paintsville City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Paintsville City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Paintsville City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Paintsville City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Paintsville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Paintsville City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Paintsville City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Paintsville City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Paintsville

City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Paintsville City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Paintsville City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Paintsville City's potential claims against them. Paintsville City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Paintsville City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Paintsville City, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Paintsville City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Paintsville City filed its original complaint on June 24, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Paintsville, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45559-

DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Paintsville City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Paintsville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Paintsville City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Paintsville City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1211. County of Calhoun v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45560-DAP: Plaintiff Calhoun County, Michigan

Calhoun County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Calhoun County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Calhoun County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Calhoun County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Calhoun County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Calhoun County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Calhoun County amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 25, 2019. See County of Calhoun v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45560-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Calhoun County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Calhoun County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Calhoun County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Calhoun County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Calhoun County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Calhoun County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Calhoun County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Calhoun County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Calhoun County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Calhoun County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Calhoun County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Calhoun County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Calhoun County began receiving those services on January 2, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Calhoun County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Calhoun County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Calhoun County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Calhoun County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Calhoun County, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Calhoun County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Calhoun County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Calhoun v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45560-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Calhoun County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Calhoun County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Calhoun County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Calhoun County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1212. County of Kalamazoo v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45561-DAP: Plaintiff Kalamazoo County, Michigan

Kalamazoo County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kalamazoo County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kalamazoo County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kalamazoo County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Kalamazoo County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kalamazoo County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kalamazoo County amended its complaint on September 23, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on June 25, 2019. *See County of Kalamazoo v. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kalamazoo County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Kalamazoo County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Kalamazoo County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kalamazoo County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Kalamazoo County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Kalamazoo County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Kalamazoo County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Kalamazoo County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Kalamazoo County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kalamazoo County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Kalamazoo County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Kalamazoo County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, but waited until September 12, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—five years and three months later. See County of Kalamazoo v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45561-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 12, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Kalamazoo County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kalamazoo County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Kalamazoo County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Kalamazoo County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kalamazoo County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kalamazoo County, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kalamazoo County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kalamazoo County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Kalamazoo v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45561-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Kalamazoo County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Kalamazoo County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Kalamazoo County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kalamazoo County, a municipality in Michigan, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1213. Hancock v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45562-DAP: Plaintiff Sheriff of Crisp County, Georgia

Sheriff of Crisp County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheriff of Crisp County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheriff of Crisp County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheriff of Crisp County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheriff of Crisp County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheriff of Crisp County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheriff of Crisp County amended its complaint on June 26, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL, as well as on August 23, 2019. See Hancock v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45562-DAP, ECF Nos. 2, 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheriff of Crisp County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above.

Sheriff of Crisp County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheriff of Crisp County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheriff of Crisp County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sheriff of Crisp County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Sheriff of Crisp County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sheriff of Crisp County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sheriff of Crisp County filed its original complaint on June 26, 2019. See Hancock v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45562-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sheriff of Crisp County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sheriff of Crisp County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sheriff of Crisp County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sheriff of Crisp County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sheriff of Crisp County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sheriff of Crisp County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sheriff of Crisp County, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Sheriff of Crisp County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sheriff of Crisp County, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1214. St. Johns County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45563-DAP: Plaintiff St Johns County, Florida

St Johns County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St Johns County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St Johns County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St Johns County's motion should be denied due to futility, as St Johns County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St Johns County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover,

St Johns County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 1, 2019. See St. Johns County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45563-DAP, ECF No. 8. St Johns County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St Johns County elected not to do so. Instead, St Johns County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St Johns County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St Johns County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019. See St. Johns County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45563-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St Johns County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating St Johns County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St Johns County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by St Johns County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and St Johns County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

St Johns County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. St Johns County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because St Johns County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 10, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St Johns County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1215. Bradford County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45564-DAP: Plaintiff Bradford County, Florida

Bradford County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bradford County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bradford County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bradford County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bradford County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bradford County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Bradford County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bradford County elected not to do so. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Bradford County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.45% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bradford County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

therefore time-barred because Bradford County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 11, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bradford County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1216. Seminole County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45565-DAP: Plaintiff Seminole County, Florida

Seminole County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Seminole County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Seminole County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Seminole County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Seminole County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Seminole County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Seminole County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Seminole County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Seminole County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019. See Seminole County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45565-DAP, ECF No. 1. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Seminole County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Seminole County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Seminole County filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Seminole County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45565-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Seminole County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Seminole County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Seminole County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Seminole County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Seminole County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 10, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Seminole County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1217. Charter Township of Pittsfield, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45566-DAP: Plaintiff Pittsfield Charter Township, Michigan

Pittsfield Charter Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pittsfield Charter Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pittsfield Charter Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pittsfield Charter Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pittsfield Charter Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pittsfield Charter Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pittsfield Charter Township amended its complaint on September 30, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 1, 2019. See Charter Township of Pittsfield, Michigan v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45566-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pittsfield Charter Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pittsfield Charter Township's deadline to amend was in 2019. Pittsfield Charter Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pittsfield Charter Township's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pittsfield Charter Township cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pittsfield Charter Township, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pittsfield Charter Township fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Pittsfield Charter Township’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Pittsfield Charter Township cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45566-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Pittsfield Charter Township never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Pittsfield Charter Township's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Pittsfield Charter Township's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Pittsfield Charter Township's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Pittsfield Charter Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Michigan law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pittsfield Charter Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Michigan law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pittsfield Charter Township, a municipality in Michigan, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

1218. Town of Oxford v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45568-DAP: Plaintiff Oxford Town, Massachusetts

Oxford Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Oxford Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Oxford Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Oxford Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Oxford Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Oxford Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45568-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Oxford Town declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Oxford Town’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Oxford Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Oxford Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Oxford Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Oxford Town). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Oxford Town to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Oxford Town filed its original complaint on June 11, 2019. See Town of Oxford v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45568-DAP, ECF No. 1. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. 1219. City of New Bedford et al. v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45569-DAP: Plaintiff New Bedford City, Massachusetts

New Bedford City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. New Bedford City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Despite filing its case years ago, Ayer Town never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Ayer Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Ayer Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Ayer Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Ayer Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ayer Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ayer Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ayer Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ayer Town filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Ayer, Massachusetts v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45570-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ayer Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Ayer Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ayer Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Ayer Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Ayer Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 7, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ayer Town, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1221. Morgan County Fiscal Court v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45571-DAP: Plaintiff Morgan County, Kentucky

Morgan County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Morgan County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Morgan County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Morgan County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Morgan County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Morgan County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Morgan County amended its complaint on September 30, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2019. See Morgan County Fiscal Court v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45571-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Morgan County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Morgan County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Morgan County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Morgan County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Morgan County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Morgan County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Morgan County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Morgan County’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Morgan County cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

units shipped to Morgan County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.08% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Morgan County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Morgan County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019. See Morgan County Fiscal Court v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45571-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Morgan County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Morgan County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Morgan County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Morgan County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Morgan County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Morgan County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Morgan County, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Morgan County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Morgan County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Morgan County Fiscal Court v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45571-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Morgan County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Morgan County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Morgan County, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1222. City of Sheridan v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45572-DAP: Plaintiff Sheridan City, Colorado

Sheridan City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sheridan City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sheridan City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sheridan City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sheridan City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sheridan City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sheridan City amended its complaint on December 24, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2019. See City of Sheridan v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45572-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sheridan City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sheridan City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Sheridan City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sheridan City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Sheridan City’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Sheridan City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.40% market share). 1223. City of Federal Heights v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45573-DAP: Plaintiff Federal Heights City, Colorado

Federal Heights City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Federal Heights City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Federal Heights City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Federal Heights City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Federal Heights City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Federal Heights City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Federal Heights City amended its complaint on December 24, 2020, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2019. See City of Federal Heights v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45573-DAP, ECF No. 12. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Federal Heights City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Federal Heights City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Federal Heights City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Federal Heights City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Federal Heights City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.09% market share for Federal Heights City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Federal Heights City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Federal Heights City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Federal Heights City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Federal Heights City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Federal Heights City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Federal Heights City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Federal Heights City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Federal Heights City's potential claims against them. Federal Heights City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Colorado law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Federal Heights City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Colorado law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Federal Heights City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Federal Heights City filed its original complaint on June 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Federal Heights v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45573-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Federal Heights City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Federal Heights City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Federal Heights City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Federal Heights City, a municipality in Colorado, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1224. Wright Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45574-DAP: Plaintiff Wright Township, Pennsylvania

Wright Township's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wright Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wright Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wright Township's motion should be denied due to futility, as Wright Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wright Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wright Township amended its complaint on September 11, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 2, 2019. See Wright Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45574-DAP, ECF No. 94. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wright Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wright Township’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wright Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wright Township’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Wright Township’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Wright Township cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

support a finding of good cause for Wright Township to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wright Township filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019. See Wright Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45574-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wright Township never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wright Township's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wright Township's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wright Township's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wright Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Wright Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Wright Township's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Wright Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Wright Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Wright Township's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Wright Township's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Wright Township's potential claims against them. Wright Township's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wright Township's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wright Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wright Township's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wright Township filed its original complaint on June 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Wright Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45574-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wright Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend.

Wright Township's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wright Township's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wright Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1225. County of Yuma v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45575-DAP: Plaintiff Yuma County, Arizona

Yuma County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Yuma County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Yuma County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Yuma County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Yuma County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Yuma County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Yuma County amended its complaint on January 7, 2021, after transfer to the MDL on July 3, 2019. See County of Yuma v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45575-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Yuma County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Yuma County's deadline to amend was in 2019.

Yuma County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Yuma County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Yuma County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.21% market share for Yuma County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Yuma County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Arizona law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Yuma County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Arizona law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Yuma County, a municipality in Arizona, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Yuma County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Yuma County filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Yuma v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45575-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Yuma County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Yuma County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Yuma County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Yuma County, a municipality in Arizona, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1226. City of Wiggins, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45576-DAP: Plaintiff Wiggins City, Mississippi

Wiggins City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wiggins City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wiggins City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wiggins City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wiggins City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wiggins City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wiggins City amended its complaint on October 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See City of Wiggins, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45576-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wiggins City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Wiggins City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Wiggins City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wiggins City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Wiggins City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Wiggins City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Wiggins City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Wiggins City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.15% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wiggins City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wiggins City filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019. See City of Wiggins, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45576-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wiggins City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Wiggins City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wiggins City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wiggins City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wiggins City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wiggins City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wiggins City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wiggins City filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Wiggins, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45576-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Wiggins City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 7, 2023. Wiggins City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No.

2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. 1227. Franklin County, Mississippi v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45577-DAP: Plaintiff Franklin County, Mississippi

Franklin County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Franklin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Franklin County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Franklin County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Franklin County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1228. Tule River Indian Tribe of California v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45579-DAP: Plaintiff Tule River Indian Tribe of California, California

Tule River Indian Tribe of California's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Tule River Indian Tribe of California failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Tule River Indian Tribe of California also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Tule River Indian Tribe of California's motion should be denied due to futility, as Tule River Indian Tribe of California does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lytton Band of Pomo Indians’ untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lytton Band of Pomo Indians’ motion should be denied due to futility, as Lytton Band of Pomo Indians does not assert any Litigating Lytton Band of Pomo Indians’ case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lytton Band of Pomo Indians’ document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lytton Band of Pomo Indians’ disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lytton Band of Pomo Indians therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians, a native tribe in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lytton Band of Pomo Indians' proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians filed its original complaint on June 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lytton Band of Pomo Indians v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45580-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lytton Band of Pomo Indians knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians' RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians' request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lytton Band of Pomo Indians, a native tribe in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1230. Sampson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45583-DAP: Plaintiff Sampson County, North Carolina

Sampson County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sampson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sampson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sampson County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sampson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sampson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sampson County amended its complaint on October 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See Sampson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45583-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sampson County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Sampson County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Sampson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sampson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Sampson County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Sampson County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Sampson County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl., Exhibit C (0.27% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sampson County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Sampson County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Sampson County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019, but waited until December 19, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See Sampson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45583-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 19, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sampson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sampson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sampson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sampson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sampson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sampson County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sampson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sampson County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Sampson County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45583-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sampson County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sampson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sampson County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sampson County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1231. City of Oviedo, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45584-DAP: Plaintiff Oviedo City, Florida

Oviedo City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Oviedo City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Oviedo City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Oviedo City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Oviedo City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Oviedo City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Oviedo City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See City of Oviedo, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45584-DAP, ECF No. 8. Oviedo City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Oviedo City elected not to do so. Instead, Oviedo City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Oviedo City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Oviedo City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See City of Oviedo, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45584-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Oviedo City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Oviedo City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Oviedo City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Oviedo City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Oviedo City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Oviedo City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Oviedo City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Oviedo City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Oviedo City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Oviedo, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45584-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Oviedo City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Oviedo City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Oviedo City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Oviedo City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Oviedo City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 13, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Oviedo City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1232. Kingston Borough, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45585-DAP: Plaintiff Kingston Borough, Pennsylvania

Kingston Borough’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Kingston Borough failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Kingston Borough also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Kingston Borough’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Kingston Borough does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Kingston Borough was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Kingston Borough amended its complaint on October 7, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See Kingston Borough, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45585-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Kingston Borough declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Kingston Borough’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Kingston Borough waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Kingston Borough’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Kingston Borough cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Kingston Borough, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Kingston Borough fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Kingston Borough’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Kingston Borough cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

units shipped to Kingston Borough's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.42% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Kingston Borough to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Kingston Borough filed its original complaint on June 11, 2019. See Kingston Borough, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45585-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Kingston Borough never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Kingston Borough's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Kingston Borough's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Kingston Borough's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Kingston Borough therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Kingston Borough failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Kingston Borough's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Kingston Borough of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Kingston Borough refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Kingston Borough's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Kingston Borough's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Kingston Borough's potential claims against them. Kingston Borough's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Kingston Borough's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Kingston Borough, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Kingston Borough's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Kingston Borough filed its original complaint on June 11, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants.

See Kingston Borough, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45585-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Kingston Borough knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Kingston Borough's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Kingston Borough's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Kingston Borough, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1233. City of Deltona, Florida v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45586-DAP: Plaintiff Deltona City, Florida

Deltona City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Deltona City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Deltona City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Deltona City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Deltona City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Deltona City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Deltona City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See City of Deltona, Florida v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45586-DAP, ECF No. 6. Deltona City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Deltona City elected not to do so. Instead, Deltona City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Deltona City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Deltona City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See City of Deltona, Florida v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45586-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Deltona City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Deltona City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Deltona City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Deltona City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Deltona City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Deltona City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Deltona City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. It is therefore indisputable that Deltona City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Deltona City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Deltona City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Deltona City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Deltona City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 13, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Deltona City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1234. Hamilton County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45589-DAP: Plaintiff Hamilton County, Florida

Hamilton County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hamilton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hamilton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hamilton County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hamilton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hamilton County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hamilton County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See Hamilton County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45589-DAP, ECF No. 4. Hamilton County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hamilton County elected not to do so. Instead, Hamilton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hamilton County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hamilton County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See Hamilton County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45589-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hamilton County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Hamilton County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hamilton County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hamilton County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hamilton County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hamilton County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hamilton County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hamilton County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hamilton County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Hamilton County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45589-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hamilton County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Hamilton County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hamilton County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Hamilton County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Hamilton County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 13, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hamilton County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1235. Suwannee County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45590-DAP: Plaintiff Suwannee County, Florida

Suwannee County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Suwannee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Suwannee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Suwannee County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Suwannee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Suwannee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Suwannee County filed its original complaint on , June 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 8, 2019. See Suwannee County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45590-DAP, ECF No. 4. Suwannee County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Suwannee County elected not to do so. OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Suwannee County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.12% market share for Suwannee County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Suwannee County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Suwannee County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See Suwannee County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45590-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Suwannee County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Suwannee County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Suwannee County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Suwannee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Suwannee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Suwannee County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Suwannee County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Suwannee County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Suwannee County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Suwannee County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Suwannee County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Suwannee County’s potential claims against them. Suwannee County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Suwannee County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Suwannee County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Suwannee County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Suwannee County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Suwannee County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45590-DAP, ECF No. 1. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Suwannee County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1236. Clay County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45591-DAP: Plaintiff Clay County, Florida

Clay County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clay County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clay County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clay County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Clay County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1237. City of St. Augustine, Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45592-DAP: Plaintiff St. Augustine City, Florida

St. Augustine City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Augustine City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Augustine City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Augustine City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Augustine City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

City of Florida City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, City of Florida City's motion should be denied due to futility, as City of Florida City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. City of Florida City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, City of Florida City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 9, 2019. See City of Florida City, Florida v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45594-DAP, ECF No. 5. City of Florida City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, City of Florida City elected not to do so. Instead, City of Florida City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. City of Florida City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. City of Florida City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Florida City, Florida v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45594-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, City of Florida City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating City of Florida City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of City of Florida City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by City of Florida City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and City of Florida City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But City of Florida City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. City of Florida City, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for City of Florida City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. City of Florida City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Florida City, Florida v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45594-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that City of Florida City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. City of Florida City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. City of Florida City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. City of Florida City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because City of Florida City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. City of Florida City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1239. City of Port St. Lucie, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45596-DAP: Plaintiff Port St. Lucie City, Florida

Port St. Lucie City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Port St. Lucie City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Port St. Lucie City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Port St. Lucie City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Port St. Lucie City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Port St. Lucie City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Port St. Lucie City elected not to do so. Instead, Port St. Lucie City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Port St. Lucie City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Port St. Lucie City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Port St. Lucie, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45596-DAP, ECF No. 1. 1240. Taylor County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45597-DAP: Plaintiff Taylor County, Florida

Taylor County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Taylor County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Taylor County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Taylor County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Taylor County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Taylor County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Taylor County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 10, 2019. See Taylor County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45597-DAP, ECF No. 4. Taylor County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Taylor County elected not to do so. Instead, Taylor County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Taylor County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Taylor County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Taylor County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Taylor County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Taylor County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Taylor County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See Taylor County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45597-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Taylor County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Taylor County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Taylor County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Taylor County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Taylor County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Taylor County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Taylor County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Taylor County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Taylor County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Taylor County's potential claims against them. Taylor County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Taylor County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Taylor County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Taylor County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Purdue Pharma LP et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45597-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Taylor County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Taylor County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No.

2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Taylor County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Taylor County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Taylor County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Taylor County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1241. City of Sanford, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45599-DAP: Plaintiff Sanford City, Florida

Sanford City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sanford City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sanford City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sanford City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Sanford City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sanford City filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See City of Sanford, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45599-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sanford City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sanford City, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1242. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45600-DAP: Plaintiff United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians, Kansas

United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians’ untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians’ motion should be denied due to futility, as United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians amended its complaint on August 12, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 10, 2019. See United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45600-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians' deadline to amend was in 2019. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians' lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold. See United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45600-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians' violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kansas law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians' delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kansas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians, a native tribe in Kansas, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians’ proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45600-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians’ RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians’ request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. United Keetoowah Band of Cherokee Indians, a native tribe in Kansas, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1243. Board of Commissioners of Leavenworth County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45602-DAP: Plaintiff Leavenworth County, Kansas

Leavenworth County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Leavenworth County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Leavenworth County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Leavenworth County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Leavenworth County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Leavenworth County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Leavenworth County amended its complaint on October 9, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See Board of Commissioners of Leavenworth County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45602-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Leavenworth County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Leavenworth County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Leavenworth County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Leavenworth County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Leavenworth County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Leavenworth County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Leavenworth County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Leavenworth County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.43% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Leavenworth County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Leavenworth County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Leavenworth County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, but waited until December 20, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See Board of Commissioners of Leavenworth County, Kansas v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45602-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 20, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Leavenworth County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Leavenworth County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Leavenworth County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Leavenworth County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

But Leavenworth County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kansas law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

1244. Union County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45603-DAP: Plaintiff Union County, Florida

Union County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Union County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Union County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Union County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Union County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Union County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Union County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See Union County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45603-DAP, ECF No. 3. Union County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Union County elected not to do so. Instead, Union County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Union County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Union County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.42% market share). Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Union County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See Union County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45603-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Union County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Union County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Union County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Union County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Union County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Union County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 14, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Union County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1245. Dixie County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45604-DAP: Plaintiff Dixie County, Florida

Dixie County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dixie County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dixie County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dixie County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Dixie County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dixie County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Dixie County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See Dixie County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45604-DAP, ECF No. 6. Dixie County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Dixie County elected not to do so. Instead, Dixie County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Dixie County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Dixie County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See Dixie County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45604-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Dixie County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Dixie County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Dixie County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Dixie County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Dixie County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Dixie County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Dixie County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Dixie County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Dixie County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Dixie County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Dixie County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Dixie County’s potential claims against them. Dixie County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Dixie County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Dixie County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Dixie County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Dixie County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Dixie County Florida v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45604-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Dixie County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Dixie County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Dixie County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Dixie County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1246. County Commissioners of Calvert County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45609-DAP: Plaintiff Calvert County, Maryland

Calvert County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Calvert County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Calvert County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Calvert County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Calvert County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Calvert County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Calvert County amended its complaint on June 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See County Commissioners of Calvert County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45609-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Calvert County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Calvert County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Calvert County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Calvert County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Calvert County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Calvert County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Calvert County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Calvert County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Calvert County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Calvert County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Calvert County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See County Commissioners of Calvert County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45609-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Calvert County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Calvert County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Calvert County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Calvert County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Calvert County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Calvert County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Calvert County, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Calvert County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Calvert County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County Commissioners of Calvert County, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45609-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Calvert County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Calvert County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Calvert County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Calvert County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Calvert County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 13, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Calvert County, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1247. Georgetown County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45612-DAP: Plaintiff Georgetown County, South Carolin

Georgetown County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Georgetown County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Georgetown County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Georgetown County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Georgetown County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Georgetown County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Georgetown County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See Georgetown County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45612-DAP, ECF No. 6. Georgetown County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Georgetown County elected not to do so. Instead, Georgetown County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Georgetown County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Georgetown County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Georgetown County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Georgetown County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Georgetown County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019. See Georgetown County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45612-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Georgetown County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)).

This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Georgetown County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Georgetown County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Georgetown County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Georgetown County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under South Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Georgetown County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under South Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Georgetown County, a municipality in South Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Georgetown County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Georgetown County filed its original complaint on June 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Georgetown County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No.

1:19-op-45612-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Georgetown County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Georgetown County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Georgetown County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Georgetown County, a municipality in South Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1248. Alamance County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45615-DAP: Plaintiff Alamance County, North Carolina

Alamance County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alamance County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alamance County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alamance County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Alamance County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alamance County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alamance County amended its complaint on October 9, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See Alamance County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45615-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alamance County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Alamance County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Alamance County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alamance County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Alamance County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Alamance County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Alamance County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Alamance County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Alamance County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alamance County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Alamance County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Alamance County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, but waited until September 9, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Alamance County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45615-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: September 9, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Alamance County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Alamance County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Alamance County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Alamance County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Alamance County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Alamance County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Alamance County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Alamance County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Alamance County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Alamance County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Alamance County’s potential claims against them. Alamance County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Alamance County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Alamance County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Alamance County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Alamance County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Alamance County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45615-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Alamance County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Alamance County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Alamance County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Alamance County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1249. Sussex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45616-DAP: Plaintiff Sussex County, New Jersey

Sussex County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sussex County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sussex County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sussex County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sussex County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sussex County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Sussex County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 11, 2019. See Sussex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45616-DAP, ECF No. 4. Sussex County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Sussex County elected not to do so. Instead, Sussex County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Sussex County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Sussex County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Sussex County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sussex County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Sussex County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Sussex County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Sussex County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Sussex County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Sussex County began receiving those services on November 2, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Sussex County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Sussex County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Sussex County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Sussex County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See Sussex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45616-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Sussex County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Sussex County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sussex County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sussex County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sussex County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Sussex County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Sussex County, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sussex County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sussex County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Sussex County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45616-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sussex County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Sussex County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Sussex County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sussex County, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1250. City of Clarksdale v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45620-DAP: Plaintiff Clarksdale City, Mississippi

Clarksdale City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Clarksdale City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Clarksdale City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Clarksdale City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Clarksdale City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Clarksdale City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Clarksdale City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 16, 2019. See City of Clarksdale v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45620-DAP, ECF No. 3. Clarksdale City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Clarksdale City elected not to do so. Instead, Clarksdale City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Clarksdale City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Purdue Pharma L.P. et al.*, Case No. 1:19-op-45620-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Clarksdale City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Clarksdale City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Clarksdale City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Clarksdale City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Clarksdale City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Clarksdale City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Clarksdale City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Clarksdale City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Clarksdale

City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Clarksdale City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Clarksdale City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Clarksdale City's potential claims against them. Clarksdale City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Mississippi law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Clarksdale City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Mississippi law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Clarksdale City, a municipality in Mississippi, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Clarksdale City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Clarksdale City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

City of Clarksdale v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45620-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Clarksdale City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Clarksdale City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Clarksdale City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Clarksdale City, a municipality in Mississippi, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Bismarck City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bismarck City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bismarck City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bismarck City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bismarck City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bismarck City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bismarck City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 18, 2019. See City of Bismarck v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45629-DAP, ECF No. 5. Bismarck City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bismarck City elected not to do so. Instead, Bismarck City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bismarck City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bismarck City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Bismarck City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bismarck City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Bismarck City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Bismarck City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Bismarck v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45629-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Bismarck City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Bismarck City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bismarck City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Bismarck City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Bismarck City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Under this Court's orders, Bismarck City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Bismarck City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Bismarck City's potential claims against them. Bismarck City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Dakota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bismarck City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Dakota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bismarck City, a municipality in North Dakota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1252. Williams County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45633-DAP: Plaintiff Williams County, North Dakota

Williams County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Williams County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Williams County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Williams County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Williams County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1253. Grand Forks County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45647-DAP: Plaintiff Grand Forks County, North Dakota

Grand Forks County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Grand Forks County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Grand Forks County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Grand Forks County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Grand Forks County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.09% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Grand Forks County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Grand Forks County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. *See Grand Forks County v. 1254. County Commission of Craig County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45652-DAP: Plaintiff Craig County, Oklahoma

Craig County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Craig County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Craig County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Craig County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Craig County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Oklahoma, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Craig County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Craig County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 22, 2019. See County Commission of Craig County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45652-DAP, ECF No. 6. Craig County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Craig County elected not to do so. Instead, Craig County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Craig County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

low to support a finding of good cause for Craig County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Craig County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See County Commission of Craig County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45652-DAP, ECF No. 2. Despite filing its case years ago, Craig County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Craig County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Craig County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Craig County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Craig County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Craig County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Craig County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Craig County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Craig County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Craig County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Craig County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Craig County's potential claims against them. Craig County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Oklahoma law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Craig County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Oklahoma law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Craig County, a municipality in Oklahoma, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Craig County is a plaintiff in Oklahoma. Craig County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because Oklahoma's public nuisance law does not extend to "the manufacturing, marketing, and selling of prescription opioids." Hunter, 499 P.3d at 730; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Craig County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Craig County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County Commission of Craig County, Oklahoma v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45652-DAP, ECF No. 2. It is therefore indisputable that Craig County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Craig County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Craig County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Craig County, a municipality in Oklahoma, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1255. Hanover Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45654-DAP: Plaintiff Hanover Township, Pennsylvania

Hanover Township’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hanover Township failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hanover Township also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hanover Township’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Hanover Township does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hanover Township was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hanover Township amended its complaint on September 27, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 22, 2019. See Hanover Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45654-DAP, ECF No. 85. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hanover Township declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hanover Township’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Hanover Township waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hanover Township’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hanover Township filed its original complaint on June 21, 2019. See Hanover Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45654-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hanover Township never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Hanover Township’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hanover Township’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hanover Township’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hanover Township therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Hanover Township failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Hanover Township’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Hanover Township of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Hanover Township refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Hanover Township’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Hanover Township’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Hanover Township’s potential claims against them. Hanover Township’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hanover Township’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hanover Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hanover Township’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hanover Township filed its original complaint on June 21, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Hanover Township, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45654-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hanover Township knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Hanover Township’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hanover Township’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hanover Township, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Lycoming County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lycoming County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lycoming County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lycoming County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lycoming County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Lycoming County amended its complaint on September 26, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 22, 2019. See County of Lycoming v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45655-DAP, ECF No. 86. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lycoming County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Lycoming County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Lycoming County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lycoming County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Lycoming County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lycoming County filed its original complaint on June 19, 2019. See County of Lycoming v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45655-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lycoming County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). The PBMs are prejudiced by Lycoming County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lycoming County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lycoming County, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1257. St. Lucie County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45656-DAP: Plaintiff St. Lucie County, Florida

St. Lucie County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Lucie County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Lucie County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Lucie County's motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Lucie County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Lucie County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Lucie County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 23, 2019. See St. Lucie County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45656-DAP, ECF No. 12. St. Lucie County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Lucie County elected not to do so. Instead, St. Lucie County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Lucie County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to St. Lucie County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Lucie County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Lucie County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019. See St. Lucie County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45656-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Lucie County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating St. Lucie County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Lucie County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But St. Lucie County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. St. Lucie County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. Lucie County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. Lucie County filed its original complaint on June 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See St. Lucie County, Florida v. St. Lucie County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. St. Lucie County's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because St. Lucie County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 13, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Lucie County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1258. People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45657-DAP: Plaintiff Williamson County, Illinois

Williamson County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Williamson County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Williamson County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Williamson County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Williamson County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Williamson County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Williamson County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 12, 2019. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45657-DAP, ECF No. 10. Williamson County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Williamson County elected not to do so. Instead, Williamson County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Williamson County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Williamson County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Williamson County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Williamson County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Williamson County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2019. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45657-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Williamson County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF

No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Williamson County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Williamson County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Williamson County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Williamson County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Illinois law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Williamson County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Illinois law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Williamson County, a municipality in Illinois, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Williamson County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Williamson County filed its original complaint on May 23, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See People of the State of Illinois et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45657-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Williamson County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 23, 2023. Williamson County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Williamson County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Williamson County, a municipality in Illinois, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1259. Claiborne County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45658-DAP: Plaintiff Claiborne County, Tennessee

Claiborne County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Claiborne County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Claiborne County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Claiborne County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Claiborne County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Claiborne County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Claiborne County amended its complaint on October 17, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 18, 2019. See Claiborne County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45658-DAP, ECF No. 9. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Claiborne County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Claiborne County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Claiborne County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Claiborne County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Claiborne County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Claiborne County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Claiborne County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Claiborne County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Claiborne County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Claiborne County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Claiborne County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Claiborne County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Tennessee law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Claiborne County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Tennessee law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Claiborne County, a municipality in Tennessee, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Claiborne County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Claiborne County filed its original complaint on June 21, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Claiborne County, Tennessee v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45658-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Claiborne County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Claiborne County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Claiborne County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Claiborne County, a municipality in Tennessee, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1260. County of Rockland, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45662-DAP: Plaintiff Rockland County, New York

Rockland County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rockland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rockland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rockland County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rockland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Rockland County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rockland County filed its original complaint on June 17, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 29, 2019. See County of Rockland, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45662-DAP, ECF No. 10. Rockland County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rockland County elected not to do so. Instead, Rockland County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rockland County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Rockland County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Rockland County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rockland County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Decl., Exhibit C (0.25% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rockland County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Rockland County filed its original complaint on June 17, 2019. See County of Rockland, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45662-DAP, ECF No. 4. Despite filing its case years ago, Rockland County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Rockland County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Rockland County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Rockland County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Rockland County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Rockland County has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Rockland County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Rockland County's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6

(denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Rockland County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Rockland County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Rockland County filed its original complaint on June 17, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Rockland, New York v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45662-DAP, ECF No. 4. It is therefore indisputable that Rockland County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Rockland County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Rockland County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

1261. Hernando County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45667-DAP: Plaintiff Hernando County, Florida

Hernando County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hernando County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hernando County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hernando County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hernando County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hernando County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hernando County amended its complaint on September 30, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 1, 2019. See Hernando County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45667-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hernando County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hernando County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Hernando County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hernando County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Hernando County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Hernando County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Hernando County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Hernando County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.26% market share for Hernando County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Hernando County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Hernando County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Hernando County filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See Hernando County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45667-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Hernando County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hernando County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hernando County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hernando County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hernando County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hernando County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hernando County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hernando County filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Hernando County v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45667-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hernando County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Hernando County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hernando County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Hernando County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Hernando County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on June 6, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hernando County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1262. Lee County v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45671-DAP: Plaintiff Lee County, Florida

Lee County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lee County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lee County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lee County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Lee County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lee County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Lee County filed its original complaint on July 9, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on July 31, 2019. See Lee County v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45671-DAP, ECF No. 9. Lee County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Lee County elected not to do so. Instead, Lee County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Lee County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Lee County filed its original complaint on July 9, 2019. See Lee County v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45671-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Lee County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lee County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lee County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lee County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lee County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lee County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lee County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lee County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lee County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lee County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lee County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lee County's potential claims against them. Lee County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lee County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lee County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lee County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lee County filed its original complaint on July 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Lee County v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45671-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Lee County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Lee County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lee County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Lee County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Lee County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on July 9, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lee County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1263. Town of Braintree v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45673-DAP: Plaintiff Braintree Town City, Massachusetts

Braintree Town City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Braintree Town City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Braintree Town City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Braintree Town City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Braintree Town City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Braintree Town City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Braintree Town City amended its complaint on October 28, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on July 31, 2019. See Town of Braintree v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45673-DAP, ECF No. 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Braintree Town City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Braintree Town City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Braintree Town City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Braintree Town City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Braintree Town City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Braintree Town City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Braintree Town City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Braintree Town City filed its original complaint on July 3, 2019. See Town of Braintree v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45673-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Braintree Town City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Braintree Town City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Braintree Town

City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Braintree Town City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Braintree Town City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Massachusetts law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Braintree Town City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Massachusetts law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Braintree Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Braintree Town City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Braintree Town City filed its original complaint on July 3, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Town of Braintree v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45673-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Braintree Town City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Braintree Town City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Braintree Town City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Massachusetts, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Braintree Town City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Braintree Town City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on July 3, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Braintree Town City, a municipality in Massachusetts, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1264. County of Wicomico, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45681-DAP: Plaintiff Wicomico County, Maryland

Wicomico County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Wicomico County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Wicomico County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Wicomico County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Wicomico County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Wicomico County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Wicomico County filed its original complaint on July 9, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 1, 2019. See County of Wicomico, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45681-DAP, ECF No. 5. Wicomico County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Wicomico County elected not to do so. Instead, Wicomico County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Wicomico County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Wicomico County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Wicomico County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Wicomico County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Wicomico County filed its original complaint on July 9, 2019. See County of Wicomico, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45681-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Wicomico County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Wicomico County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Wicomico County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Wicomico County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Wicomico County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maryland law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Wicomico County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maryland law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Wicomico County, a municipality in Maryland, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Wicomico County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Wicomico County filed its original complaint on July 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See County of Wicomico, Maryland v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45681-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Wicomico County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Wicomico County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Wicomico County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Maryland, public-nuisance claims are subject to a three-year limitations period. Wicomico County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Wicomico County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on July 9, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See

Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Wicomico County, a municipality in Maryland, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1265. Fauquier County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt LLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45686-DAP: Plaintiff Fauquier County, Virginia

Fauquier County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fauquier County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fauquier County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fauquier County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Fauquier County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fauquier County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on March 27, 2019. See Fauquier County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt LLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45686-DAP, ECF No. 1-1-1-4 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Fauquier County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 49 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Fauquier County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Fauquier County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Fauquier County's complaint, Fauquier County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Fauquier County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Fauquier County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.002% market share for Fauquier County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fauquier County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Fauquier County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.47% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Fauquier County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fauquier County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Fauquier County filed its original complaint on March 27, 2019, but waited until August 7, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Fauquier County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt LLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45686-DAP, ECF No. 1-1–1-4; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 7, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Fauquier County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Fauquier County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Fauquier County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Fauquier County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Fauquier County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Fauquier County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Fauquier County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Fauquier County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Fauquier County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Fauquier County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Fauquier County’s potential claims against them. Fauquier County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fauquier County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fauquier County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fauquier County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fauquier County filed its original complaint on March 27, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fauquier County, Virginia v. Mallinckrodt LLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45686-DAP, ECF No. 1-1–1-4. Even assuming arguendo that Fauquier County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 27, 2023. Fauquier County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fauquier County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fauquier County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1266. Board of Supervisors, Prince William County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45687-DAP: Plaintiff Prince William County, Virginia

Prince William County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Prince William County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Prince William County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Prince William County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Prince William County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1267. Northumberland County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45688-DAP: Plaintiff Northumberland County, Virginia

Northumberland County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Northumberland County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Northumberland County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Northumberland County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Northumberland County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Litigating Northumberland County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Northumberland County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Northumberland County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Northumberland County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Northumberland County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Northumberland County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Northumberland County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Northumberland County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Northumberland County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Northumberland County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Northumberland County's potential claims against them. Northumberland County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Northumberland County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Northumberland County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Northumberland County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Northumberland County filed its original complaint on April 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Northumberland County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45688-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Northumberland County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 5, 2023. Northumberland County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Northumberland County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Northumberland County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1268. Strafford County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45689-DAP: Plaintiff Strafford County, New Hampshire

Strafford County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Strafford County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Strafford County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Strafford County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Strafford County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Strafford County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Strafford County filed its original complaint on September 18, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 2, 2019. See Strafford County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45689-DAP, ECF No. 53. Strafford County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Strafford County elected not to do so. Instead, Strafford County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Strafford County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Strafford County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Strafford County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Strafford County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Strafford County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Strafford County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute.

ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Strafford County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Strafford County’s potential claims against them. Strafford County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Hampshire law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Strafford County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Hampshire law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Strafford County, a municipality in New Hampshire, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1269. City of Claremont, NH v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45690-DAP: Plaintiff Claremont City, New Hampshire

Claremont City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Claremont City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Claremont City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Claremont City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Claremont City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Claremont City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Claremont City filed its original complaint on September 18, 2018. See City of Claremont, NH v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45690-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Claremont City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Claremont City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Claremont City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 1270. Grafton County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45691-DAP: Plaintiff Grafton County, New Hampshire

Grafton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Grafton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Grafton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Grafton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Grafton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Grafton County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Grafton County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Grafton County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Grafton County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Grafton County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Grafton County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Grafton County's potential claims against them. Grafton County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

45691-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Grafton County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 18, 2022. Grafton County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. Grafton County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Grafton County, a municipality in New Hampshire, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1271. Halifax County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45692-DAP: Plaintiff Halifax County, Virginia

Halifax County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Halifax County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Halifax County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Halifax County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Halifax County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Halifax County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 29, 2019. See Halifax County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45692-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Halifax County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 40 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Halifax County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Halifax County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Halifax County's complaint, Halifax County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Halifax County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

units shipped to Halifax County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.48% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Halifax County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Halifax County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Halifax County filed its original complaint on April 29, 2019, but waited until August 6, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Halifax County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45692-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 6, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Halifax County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Halifax County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Halifax County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Halifax County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Halifax County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Halifax County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Halifax County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Halifax County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Halifax County's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Halifax County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Halifax County’s potential claims against them. Halifax County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Halifax County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Halifax County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Halifax County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Halifax County filed its original complaint on April 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Halifax County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45692-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Halifax County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 29, 2023. Halifax County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Halifax County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Halifax County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Lexington City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Lexington City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Lexington City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Lexington City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Lexington City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Lexington City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 9, 2019. See City of Lexington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45693-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Lexington City also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 47 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Lexington City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Lexington City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Lexington City's complaint, Lexington City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Lexington City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

a finding of good cause for Lexington City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Lexington City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Lexington City filed its original complaint on April 9, 2019, but waited until August 6, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See City of Lexington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45693-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 6, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Lexington City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Lexington City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Lexington City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Lexington City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Lexington City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Lexington City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Lexington City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Lexington City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Lexington City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Lexington City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Lexington City's potential claims against them. Lexington City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Lexington City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Lexington City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Lexington City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Lexington City filed its original complaint on April 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Lexington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45693-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Lexington City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Lexington City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1273. Rockbridge County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45694-DAP: Plaintiff Rockbridge County, Virginia

Rockbridge County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rockbridge County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rockbridge County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rockbridge County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Rockbridge County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Rockbridge County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 38 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Rockbridge County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Rockbridge County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Rockbridge County filed its original complaint on April 29, 2019, but waited until July 24, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Rockbridge County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45694-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 24, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. 1274. Roanoke County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45695-DAP: Plaintiff Roanoke County, Virginia

Roanoke County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Roanoke County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Roanoke County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Roanoke County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Roanoke County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Roanoke County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on March 25, 2019. See Roanoke County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45695-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Roanoke County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 44 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Roanoke County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Roanoke County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Roanoke County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Roanoke County began receiving those services on April 2, 2012. See id. Inasmuch as Roanoke County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Roanoke County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. 1275. City of Roanoke, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45696-DAP: Plaintiff Roanoke City, Virginia

Roanoke City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Roanoke City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. But Roanoke City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Roanoke City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Roanoke City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Roanoke City filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Roanoke, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45696-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Roanoke City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 22, 2023. Roanoke City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Roanoke City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Roanoke City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Salem City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Salem City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Salem City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Salem City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Salem City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Salem City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on March 22, 2019. See City of Salem, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45697-DAP, ECF No. 1-2 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Salem City also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 41 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Salem City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Salem City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Salem City's complaint, Salem City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Salem City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Salem City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.05% market share for Salem City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Salem City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Salem City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Salem City filed its original complaint on March 22, 2019, but waited until July 8, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See City of Salem, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45697-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 8, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Salem City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Salem City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Salem City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Salem City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Salem City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Salem City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Salem City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Salem City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Salem City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Salem City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Salem City’s potential claims against them. Salem City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Salem City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Salem City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies

Floyd County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Floyd County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Floyd County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Floyd County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Floyd County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its Alleghany County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alleghany County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alleghany County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alleghany County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Alleghany County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Franklin County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Franklin County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Franklin County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Franklin County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Franklin County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Franklin County filed its original complaint on April 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Franklin County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45701-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Franklin County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 9, 2023. Franklin County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Franklin County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Franklin County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1280. Madison County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45702-DAP: Plaintiff Madison County, Virginia

Madison County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Madison County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Madison County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Madison County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Madison County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Madison County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on May 10, 2019. See Madison County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45702-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Madison County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 28 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Madison County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Madison County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Madison County's complaint, Madison County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Madison County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Madison County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Madison County filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019, but waited until July 11, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Madison County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45702-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 11, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Madison County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Madison County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Madison County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Madison County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Madison County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Madison County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Madison County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Madison County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Madison County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Madison County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Madison County’s potential claims against them. Madison County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Madison County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Madison County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Madison County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Madison County filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Madison County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45702-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Madison County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 10, 2023. Madison County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Madison County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madison County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1281. Rockingham County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45703-DAP: Plaintiff Rockingham County, New Hampshire

Rockingham County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Rockingham County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Rockingham County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Rockingham County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Rockingham County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Rockingham County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Rockingham County filed its original complaint on September 18, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 19, 2019. See Rockingham County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45703-DAP, ECF No. 52. Rockingham County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Rockingham County elected not to do so. Instead, Rockingham County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Rockingham County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Rockingham County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.10% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Rockingham County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Rockingham County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Rockingham County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Rockingham County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Rockingham County's potential claims against them. Rockingham County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

1282. Belknap County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45705-DAP: Plaintiff Belknap County, New Hampshire

Belknap County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Belknap County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Belknap County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Belknap County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Belknap County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1283. Cheshire County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45706-DAP: Plaintiff Cheshire County, New Hampshire

Cheshire County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Cheshire County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. 1284. Town of Belmont, NH v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45707-DAP: Plaintiff Belmont Town, New Hampshire

Belmont Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Belmont Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Belmont Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Belmont Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Belmont Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Belmont Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Belmont Town filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 22, 2019. See Town of Belmont, NH v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45707-DAP, ECF No. 51. Belmont Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Belmont Town elected not to do so. Instead, Belmont Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Belmont Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Belmont Town filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018. See Town of Belmont, NH v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45707-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Belmont Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Belmont Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Belmont Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Belmont Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Belmont Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Belmont Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Belmont Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Belmont Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Belmont Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Belmont Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Belmont Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Belmont Town’s potential claims against them. Belmont Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Hampshire law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Belmont Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Hampshire law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Belmont Town, a municipality in New Hampshire, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Belmont Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Belmont Town filed its original complaint on September 19, 2018, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Town of Belmont, NH v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45707-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Belmont Town first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on September 19, 2022. Belmont Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Belmont Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Belmont Town, a municipality in New Hampshire, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1285. City of Chesapeake, Virginia v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45712-DAP: Plaintiff Chesapeake City, Virginia

Chesapeake City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chesapeake City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chesapeake City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chesapeake City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chesapeake City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chesapeake City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 5, 2019. See City of Chesapeake, Virginia v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45712-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Chesapeake City also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 38 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Chesapeake City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Chesapeake City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Chesapeake City's complaint, Chesapeake City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Chesapeake City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Chesapeake City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Chesapeake City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chesapeake City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Chesapeake City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.49% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chesapeake City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Chesapeake City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Chesapeake City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Chesapeake City began receiving those services on July 7, 2007. See id. Inasmuch as Chesapeake City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Chesapeake City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Chesapeake City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Chesapeake City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Chesapeake City filed its original complaint on April 5, 2019, but waited until August 1, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See City of Chesapeake, Virginia v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45712-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 1, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Chesapeake City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Chesapeake City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Chesapeake City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Chesapeake City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Chesapeake City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Chesapeake City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Chesapeake City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Chesapeake City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Chesapeake City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Chesapeake City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Chesapeake City’s potential claims against them. Chesapeake City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chesapeake City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chesapeake City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chesapeake City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chesapeake City filed its original complaint on April 5, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Chesapeake, Virginia v. Actavis, LLC et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45712-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Chesapeake City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 5, 2023. Chesapeake City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above.

Chesapeake City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chesapeake City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1286. Accomack County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45715-DAP: Plaintiff Accomack County, Virginia

Accomack County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Accomack County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Accomack County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Accomack County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Accomack County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Accomack County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 5, 2019. See Accomack County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45715-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Accomack County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 33 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Accomack County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Accomack County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. Accomack County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Accomack County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Accomack County filed its original complaint on April 5, 2019, but waited until July 21, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See Accomack County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45715-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 21, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. The PBMs notified Accomack County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Accomack County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Accomack County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Accomack County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Accomack County’s potential claims against them. Accomack County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Accomack County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above

1287. City of Bristol, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45719-DAP: Plaintiff Bristol City, Virginia

Bristol City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bristol City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bristol City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bristol City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Bristol City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bristol City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on March 25, 2019. See City of Bristol, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45719-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Bristol City also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 45 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Bristol City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Bristol City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. Bristol City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Bristol City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Bristol City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bristol City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Bristol City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Bristol City filed its original complaint on March 25, 2019, but waited until July 22, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See City of Bristol, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45719-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 22, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Bristol City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Bristol City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Bristol City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Bristol City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Bristol City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Bristol City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Bristol City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Bristol City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Bristol City’s potential claims against them. Bristol City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bristol City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bristol City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bristol City filed its original complaint on March 25, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Bristol, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45719-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Bristol City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 25, 2023. Bristol City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bristol City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bristol City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1288. Louisa County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45720-DAP: Plaintiff Louisa County, Virginia

Louisa County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Louisa County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Louisa County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Louisa County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Louisa County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Louisa County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on May 10, 2019. See Louisa County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45720-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Louisa County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 27 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Louisa County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Louisa County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Louisa County's complaint, Louisa County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Louisa County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Louisa County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.21% market share for Louisa County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Louisa County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Louisa County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Louisa County filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019, but waited until August 5, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—more than five years later. See

Louisa County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45720-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 5, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Louisa County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Louisa County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Louisa County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Louisa County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Louisa County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Louisa County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Louisa County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Louisa County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Louisa County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Louisa County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Louisa County’s potential claims against them. Louisa County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Louisa County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Louisa County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Louisa County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Louisa County filed its original complaint on May 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Louisa County, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45720-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Louisa County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 10, 2023. Louisa County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Louisa County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Louisa County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1289. City of St. Albans, VT v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45721-DAP: Plaintiff St. Albans City, Vermont

St. Albans City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. St. Albans City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. St. Albans City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, St. Albans City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as St. Albans City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. St. Albans City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, St. Albans City amended its complaint on November 19, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 23, 2019. See City of St. Albans, VT v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45721-DAP, ECF No. 4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, St. Albans City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. St. Albans City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. St. Albans City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. St. Albans City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. St. Albans City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. St. Albans City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. St. Albans City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to St. Albans City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for St. Albans City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Albans City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Exhibit C (0.07% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for St. Albans City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. St. Albans City filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019. See City of St. Albans, VT v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45721-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, St. Albans City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating St. Albans City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of St. Albans City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by St. Albans City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and St. Albans City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. St. Albans City, a municipality in Vermont, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for St. Albans City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. St. Albans City filed its original complaint on June 10, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

City of St. Albans, VT v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45721-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that St. Albans City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. St. Albans City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. St. Albans City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. St. Albans City, a municipality in Vermont, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1290. City of Youngstown v. Actavis Pharma, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45722-DAP: Plaintiff Youngstown City, Ohio

Youngstown City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Youngstown City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Youngstown City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Youngstown City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Youngstown City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Youngstown City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Youngstown City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on August 22, 2019. See City of Youngstown v. Actavis Pharma, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45722-DAP, ECF No. 1. Youngstown City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Youngstown City elected not to do so. Youngstown City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Youngstown City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Youngstown City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.08% market share for Youngstown City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Youngstown City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Youngstown City filed its original complaint on August 22, 2019. See City of Youngstown v. Actavis Pharma, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45722-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Youngstown City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Youngstown City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Youngstown City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Youngstown City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Youngstown City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Youngstown City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Youngstown City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Youngstown City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Youngstown City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Youngstown City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Youngstown City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Youngstown City's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because "all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act." In re Nat'l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Youngstown City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Youngstown City filed its original complaint on August 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Youngstown v. Actavis Pharma, Inc. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45722-DAP, ECF No. 1. Youngstown City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Youngstown City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1291. City of Hazleton, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45724-DAP: Plaintiff Hazleton City, Pennsylvania

Hazleton City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Hazleton City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Hazleton City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Hazleton City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Hazleton City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Hazleton City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Hazleton City amended its complaint on November 26, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 18, 2019. See City of Hazleton, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45724-DAP, ECF No. 79. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Hazleton City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Hazleton City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Hazleton City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Hazleton City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Hazleton City filed its original complaint on August 13, 2019. See City of Hazleton, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45724-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Hazleton City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Hazleton City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Hazleton City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Hazleton City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Hazleton City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Hazleton City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Hazleton City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Hazleton City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Hazleton City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Hazleton City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Hazleton City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Hazleton City's potential claims against them. Hazleton City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Pennsylvania law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Hazleton City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Pennsylvania law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Hazleton City, a municipality in Pennsylvania, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Hazleton City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Hazleton City filed its original complaint on August 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Hazleton, Pennsylvania v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45724-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Hazleton City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Hazleton City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Hazleton City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Hazleton City, a municipality in Pennsylvania, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1292. Chatham County Hospital Authority, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45725-DAP: Plaintiff Chatham County Hospital Authority, Georgia

Chatham County Hospital Authority's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chatham County Hospital Authority failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chatham County Hospital Authority also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chatham County Hospital Authority's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chatham County Hospital Authority does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chatham County Hospital Authority was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chatham County Hospital Authority filed its original complaint on July 3, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 27, 2019. See Chatham County Hospital Authority, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45725-DAP, ECF No. 5. Chatham County Hospital Authority could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chatham County Hospital Authority elected not to do so. Instead, Chatham County Hospital Authority waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chatham County Hospital Authority's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chatham County Hospital Authority's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chatham County Hospital Authority, a hospital in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chatham County Hospital Authority's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chatham County Hospital Authority filed its original complaint on July 3, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Chatham County Hospital Authority, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45725-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chatham County Hospital Authority knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Chatham County Hospital Authority's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chatham County Hospital Authority's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chatham County Hospital Authority, a hospital in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1293. County of Alameda, California et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45055-DAP: Plaintiff Alameda County, California

Alameda County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Alameda County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Alameda County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Alameda County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Alameda County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Alameda County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Alameda County amended its complaint on October 4, 2019, before transfer to the MDL on February 7, 2020. See County of Alameda, California et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:20-op-45055-DAP, ECF No. 1-4. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Alameda County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Alameda County’s deadline to amend was in 2020. Alameda County waited four years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Alameda County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Alameda County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.06% market share for Alameda County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alameda County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Alameda County’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.16% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Alameda County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Alameda County, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Alameda County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Alameda County filed its amended complaint on October 4, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Alameda, California et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case

No. 1:20-op-45055-DAP, ECF No. 1-4. Even assuming arguendo that Alameda County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on October 4, 2023. Alameda County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Alameda County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Alameda County, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1294. City of Westminster et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45727-DAP: Plaintiff Westminster City, California

Westminster City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Westminster City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Westminster City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Westminster City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Westminster City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Westminster City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Westminster City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 27, 2019. See City of Westminster et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45727-DAP, ECF No. 24. Westminster City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Westminster City elected not to do so. Instead, Westminster City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Westminster City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Westminster City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Westminster City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Westminster City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Westminster City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Westminster City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, but waited until February 26, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—nearly eleven months later. See City of Westminster et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45727-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 26, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Westminster City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Westminster City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Westminster City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Westminster City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Westminster City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Westminster City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Westminster City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Westminster et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45727-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Westminster City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 28, 2023. Westminster City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Westminster City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Westminster City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1295. City of San Clemente et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45728-DAP: Plaintiff San Clemente City, California

San Clemente City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. The Court previously dismissed San Clemente City’s case. Moreover, San Clemente City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Clemente City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover,

San Clemente City's motion should be denied due to futility, as San Clemente City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Jurisdiction. This Court previously dismissed San Clemente City's case on September 30, 2019. See City of San Clemente et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45728-DAP, ECF No. 29. "Following entry of final judgment, a party may not seek to amend their complaint without first moving to alter, set aside or vacate judgment pursuant to either Rule 59 or Rule 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure." In re Ferro Corp., 511 F.3d at 624 (citation omitted). Without such post-judgment relief, the "district court lacks power to grant a motion to amend the complaint" because there is no "live case or controversy before the district court." Id. (quoting Acevedo-Villalobos, 22 F.3d at 389). San Clemente City has neither moved for post-judgment relief nor met the heightened requirements for reopening a case. See Leisure Caviar, 616 F.3d at 617 ("A claimant who seeks to amend a complaint after losing the case must provide a compelling explanation to the district court for granting the motion."). San Clemente City has not offered any basis to reopen its case, so its motion for leave to amend must be denied. See id. (affirming denial of leave to amend after judgment, in part, because the plaintiff was previously on notice of the alleged "newly discovered evidence" offered in support of the motion).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. San Clemente City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. San Clemente City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. San Clemente City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Lack of Diligence. San Clemente City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Clemente City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 27, 2019. See City of San Clemente et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45728-DAP, ECF No. 28. San Clemente City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Clemente City elected not to do so. Instead, San Clemente City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Clemente City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

too low to support a finding of good cause for San Clemente City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. San Clemente City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019. See City of San Clemente et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45728-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, San Clemente City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating San Clemente City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of San Clemente City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by San Clemente City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and San Clemente City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. San Clemente City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for San Clemente City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. San Clemente City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of San Clemente et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45728-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that San Clemente City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 28, 2023. San Clemente City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. San Clemente City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Clemente City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1296. City of Danville, Virginia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45730-DAP: Plaintiff Danville City, Virginia

Danville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Danville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Danville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Danville City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Danville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Danville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Danville City amended its complaint on November 19, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 27, 2019. See City of Danville, Virginia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45730-DAP, ECF No. 6. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Danville City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Danville City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Danville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Danville City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Danville City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Danville City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Danville City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Danville City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.02% market share for Danville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Danville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts’ Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Danville City’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.32% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Danville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts’ mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Danville City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Danville City filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, but waited until December 16, 2019 to implement a litigation hold—six months later. See City of Danville, Virginia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45730-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 16, 2019). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Danville City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Danville City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Danville City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Danville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Danville City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Danville City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Danville City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Danville City filed its original complaint on June 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See

City of Danville, Virginia v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45730-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Danville City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Danville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Danville City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Danville City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1297. Pemiscot County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45733-DAP: Plaintiff Pemiscot County, Missouri

Pemiscot County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Pemiscot County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Pemiscot County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Pemiscot County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Pemiscot County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Pemiscot County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Pemiscot County amended its complaint on November 19, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL.

See Pemiscot County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45733-DAP, ECF No. 3. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Pemiscot County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Pemiscot County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Pemiscot County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Pemiscot County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Pemiscot County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro; Baron & Budd, P.C.; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Pemiscot County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Pemiscot County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Pemiscot County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.04% market share for Pemiscot County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Pemiscot County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Pemiscot County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Pemiscot County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Pemiscot County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Pemiscot County filed its original complaint on August 26, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Pemiscot County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45733-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Pemiscot County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Pemiscot County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Pemiscot County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Pemiscot County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Irvine City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Irvine City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Irvine City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Irvine City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Irvine City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Irvine City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Irvine City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 27, 2019. See City of Irvine et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45734-DAP, ECF No. 25. Irvine City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Irvine City elected not to do so. Instead, Irvine City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Irvine City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Irvine City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Irvine City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Irvine City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Irvine City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019. See City of Irvine et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45734-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Despite filing its case years ago, Irvine City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Irvine City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Irvine City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Irvine City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Irvine City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Irvine City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Irvine City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Irvine City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Irvine City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Irvine City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Irvine City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Irvine et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45734-DAP, ECF No. 1-3. Even assuming arguendo that Irvine City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 28, 2023. Irvine City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Irvine City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Irvine City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1299. City of Costa Mesa et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45736-DAP: Plaintiff Costa Mesa City, California

Costa Mesa City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. The Court previously dismissed Costa Mesa City’s case. Moreover, Costa Mesa City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Costa Mesa City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Costa Mesa City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Costa Mesa City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Jurisdiction. This Court previously dismissed Costa Mesa City’s case on October 4, 2019. See City of Costa Mesa et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45736-DAP, ECF No. 27. “Following entry of final judgment, a party may not seek to amend their complaint without first moving to alter, set aside or vacate judgment pursuant to either Rule 59 or Rule 60 of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure.” In re Ferro Corp., 511 F.3d at 624 (citation omitted). Without such post-judgment relief, the “district court lacks power to grant a motion to amend the complaint” because there is no “live case or controversy before the district court.” Id.

(quoting Acevedo-Villalobos, 22 F.3d at 389). Costa Mesa City has neither moved for post-judgment relief nor met the heightened requirements for reopening a case. See Leisure Caviar, 616 F.3d at 617 (“A claimant who seeks to amend a complaint after losing the case must provide a compelling explanation to the district court for granting the motion.”). Costa Mesa City has not offered any basis to reopen its case, so its motion for leave to amend must be denied. See id. (affirming denial of leave to amend after judgment, in part, because the plaintiff was previously on notice of the alleged “newly discovered evidence” offered in support of the motion).

Lack of Diligence. Costa Mesa City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Costa Mesa City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 28, 2019. See City of Costa Mesa et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45736-DAP, ECF No. 26. Costa Mesa City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Costa Mesa City elected not to do so. Instead, Costa Mesa City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Costa Mesa City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Costa Mesa City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Motley Rice LLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Costa Mesa City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Costa Mesa City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Costa Mesa City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Costa Mesa City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Costa Mesa City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Costa Mesa City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Costa Mesa City filed its original complaint on March 28, 2019, but waited until February 26, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—nearly eleven months later. See City of Costa Mesa et al. v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45736-DAP, ECF No. 1-2; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: February 26, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Costa Mesa City’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Costa Mesa City’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Costa Mesa City’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Costa Mesa City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. Costa Mesa City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on March 28, 2023. Costa Mesa City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Costa Mesa City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Costa Mesa City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Austin City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Austin City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Austin City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Austin City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Austin City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Austin City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Austin City amended its complaint on April 22, 2021, after transfer to the MDL on August 28, 2019. See City of Austin, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45739-DAP, ECF No. 24. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Austin City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Austin City’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Austin City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Austin City’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Austin City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Austin, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45739-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Despite filing its case years ago, Austin City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See

ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Austin City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Austin City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Austin City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Austin City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Indiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Austin City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Indiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Austin City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Austin, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45739-DAP, ECF No.

1-1. Indeed, Austin City has previously used those same factual allegations to assert a RICO claim against other Defendants, but it declined to assert such a RICO claim against the PBMs. City of Austin, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45739-DAP, ECF No. 24. Even assuming arguendo that Austin City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 14, 2023. Austin City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Austin City, a municipality in Indiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

Madison City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Madison City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Madison City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Madison City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Madison City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Madison City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Madison City amended its complaint on June 18, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 19, 2019, as well as on April 22, 2021. See City of Madison, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45740-DAP, ECF Nos. 1-1, 25. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Madison City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Madison City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Madison City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Madison City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Madison City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019. See City of Madison, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Despite filing its case years ago, Madison City never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Madison City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Madison City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Madison City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Madison City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Indiana law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Madison City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Indiana law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Madison City, a municipality in Indiana, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Madison City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Madison City filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Madison, Indiana v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45740-DAP, ECF No. 1-2. Even assuming arguendo that Madison City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on June 14, 2023. Madison City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Madison City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Madison City, a municipality in Indiana, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1302. Passaic County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45741-DAP: Plaintiff Passaic County, New Jersey

Passaic County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Passaic County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Passaic County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Passaic County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Passaic County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Passaic County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Passaic County filed its original complaint on July 25, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 29, 2019. See Passaic County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45741-DAP, ECF No. 4. Passaic County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Passaic County elected not to do so. Instead, Passaic County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Passaic County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Passaic County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Passaic County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Passaic County began receiving those services on April 5, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Passaic County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Passaic County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Passaic County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Passaic County filed its original complaint on July 25, 2019. See Passaic County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45741-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Passaic County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Passaic County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Passaic County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Passaic County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Passaic County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New Jersey law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Passaic County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New Jersey law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Passaic County, a municipality in New Jersey, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Passaic County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Passaic County filed its original complaint on July 25, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Passaic County, New Jersey v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45741-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Passaic County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Passaic County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Passaic County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Passaic County, a municipality in New Jersey, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1303. City of Fairfield, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45742-DAP: Plaintiff Fairfield City, Ohio

Fairfield City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fairfield City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fairfield City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fairfield City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fairfield City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Ohio, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fairfield City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Fairfield City amended its complaint on November 25, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 29, 2019. See City of Fairfield, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45742-DAP, ECF No. 21. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Fairfield City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Fairfield City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Fairfield City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Fairfield City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information

[she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Fairfield City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Fairfield City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Fairfield City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Fairfield City filed its original complaint on July 22, 2019, but waited until December 13, 2019 to implement a litigation hold. See City of Fairfield, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45742-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: December 13, 2019). Fairfield City's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Fairfield City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Fairfield City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Fairfield City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Fairfield City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Fairfield City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Fairfield City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Fairfield City's potential claims against them. Fairfield City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Ohio law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fairfield City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Ohio law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fairfield City, a municipality in Ohio, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff’s Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Fairfield City is a plaintiff in Ohio. Fairfield City’s request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because “all common-law public-nuisance claims arising from the sale of a product have been abrogated by the Ohio Product Liability Act.” In re Nat’l Prescription Opiate Litig., 2024 WL 5049302, at *1, 2024-OHIO-5744, ¶ 1; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fairfield City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fairfield City filed its original complaint on July 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Fairfield, Ohio v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45742-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Fairfield City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Fairfield City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555));

see Section III.B.4, above. Fairfield City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fairfield City, a municipality in Ohio, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1304. City of Argo, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45744-DAP: Plaintiff Argo Town, Alabama

Argo Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Argo Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Argo Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Argo Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Argo Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Argo Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Argo Town filed its original complaint on August 8, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 29, 2019. See City of Argo, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45744-DAP, ECF No. 10. Argo Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Argo Town elected not to do so. Instead, Argo Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Argo Town’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Argo Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Argo Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Argo Town filed its original complaint on August 8, 2019. See City of Argo, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45744-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Argo Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Argo Town’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Argo Town’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Argo Town’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Argo Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Argo Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Argo Town’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Argo Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Argo Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Argo Town’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Argo Town’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Argo Town’s potential claims against them. Argo Town’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Argo Town’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Argo Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Argo Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Argo Town filed its original complaint on August 8, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Argo, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45744-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Argo Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Argo Town’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Argo Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Argo Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Argo Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on August 8, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Argo Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1305. Covington County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45751-DAP: Plaintiff Covington County, Alabama

Covington County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Covington County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Covington County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Covington County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Covington County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Covington County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Covington County filed its original complaint on July 31, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 29, 2019. See Covington County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45751-DAP, ECF No. 25. Covington County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Covington County elected not to do so. Instead, Covington County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Covington County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Covington County’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Covington County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Covington County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Covington County filed its original complaint on July 31, 2019. See Covington County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45751-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Covington County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Covington County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Covington County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Covington County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Covington County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Covington County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Covington County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Covington County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Covington County filed its original complaint on July 31, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Covington County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45751-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Covington County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Covington County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Covington County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Covington County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Covington County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on July 31, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Covington County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Covington County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1306. Bingham County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45758-DAP: Plaintiff Bingham County, Idaho

Bingham County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bingham County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bingham County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bingham County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bingham County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bingham County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bingham County filed its original complaint on July 26, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 30, 2019. See Bingham County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45758-DAP, ECF No. 4. Bingham County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bingham County elected not to do so. Instead, Bingham County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bingham County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Bingham County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Bingham County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Idaho law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bingham County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Idaho law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bingham County, a municipality in Idaho, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bingham County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bingham County filed its original complaint on July 26, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bingham County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45758-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bingham County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Bingham

County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bingham County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bingham County, a municipality in Idaho, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1307. Bertie County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45759-DAP: Plaintiff Bertie County, North Carolina

Bertie County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Bertie County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Bertie County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Bertie County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Bertie County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Bertie County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Bertie County amended its complaint on November 19, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on August 30, 2019. See Bertie County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45759-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Bertie County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Bertie County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Bertie County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Bertie County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Bertie County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Bertie County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Bertie County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the "plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint"); Thurmond, 649 F. App'x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff's counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants' conduct).

low to support a finding of good cause for Bertie County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Bertie County filed its original complaint on August 3, 2019, but waited until January 9, 2020 to implement a litigation hold. See Bertie County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45759-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: January 9, 2020). Bertie County's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Bertie County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Bertie County, a municipality in North Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Bertie County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Bertie County filed its original complaint on August 3, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Bertie County v. AmerisourceBergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45759-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Bertie County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Bertie County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Bertie County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Bertie County, a municipality in North Carolina, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1308. LaMoure County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45760-DAP: Plaintiff La Moure County, North Dakota

La Moure County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. La Moure County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. La Moure County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, La Moure County's motion should be denied due to futility, as La Moure County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. La Moure County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, La Moure County filed its original complaint on August 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on August 30, 2019. See LaMoure County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45760-DAP, ECF No. 4. La Moure County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, La Moure County elected not to do so. Instead, La Moure County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. La Moure County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. La Moure County filed its original complaint on August 13, 2019. See LaMoure County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45760-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, La Moure County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating La Moure County’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of La Moure County’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by La Moure County’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and La Moure County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, La Moure County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to La Moure County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified La Moure County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit

B), but La Moure County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, La Moure County's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. La Moure County's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against La Moure County's potential claims against them. La Moure County's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under North Dakota law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But La Moure County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under North Dakota law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. La Moure County, a municipality in North Dakota, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for La Moure County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. La Moure County filed its original complaint on August 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See LaMoure County v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45760-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that La Moure County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. La Moure County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. La Moure County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. La Moure County, a municipality in North Dakota, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1309. Fairfax County Board Of Supervisors v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45766-DAP: Plaintiff Fairfax County, Virginia

Fairfax County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Fairfax County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Fairfax County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Fairfax County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Fairfax County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Fairfax County previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on April 30, 2019. See Fairfax County Board Of Supervisors v. Purdue

Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45766-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Fairfax County also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 32 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Fairfax County seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Fairfax County's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Fairfax County's complaint, Fairfax County already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Fairfax County was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Fairfax County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Fairfax County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Fairfax County began receiving those services on November 7, 2013. See id. Inasmuch as Fairfax County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Fairfax County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Fairfax County’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Fairfax County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Fairfax County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Fairfax County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Fairfax County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Fairfax County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Fairfax County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Fairfax County’s potential claims against them. Fairfax County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Fairfax County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Fairfax County, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Fairfax County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Fairfax County filed its original complaint on April 30, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See Fairfax County Board Of Supervisors v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45766-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Fairfax County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on April 30, 2023. Fairfax County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Fairfax County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Fairfax County, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1310. City Of San Jose v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45768-DAP: Plaintiff San Jose City, California

San Jose City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. San Jose City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. San Jose City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, San Jose City's motion should be denied due to futility, as San Jose City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. San Jose City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, San Jose City amended its complaint on November 25, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 3, 2019. See City Of San Jose v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45768-DAP, ECF No. 8. Unlike many other plaintiffs, San Jose City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. San Jose City's deadline to amend was in 2019. San Jose City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. San Jose City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information

[she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. San Jose City cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. San Jose City, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. San Jose City fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

units shipped to San Jose City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.39% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for San Jose City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. San Jose City previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified San Jose City of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and San Jose City began receiving those services on April 16, 2010. See id. Inasmuch as San Jose City seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), San Jose City knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. San Jose City's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. San Jose City filed its original complaint on August 2, 2019, but waited until January 24, 2020 to implement a litigation hold. See City Of San Jose v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45768-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: January 24, 2020). San Jose City's violation of the Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455) and disregard for its discovery obligations is prejudicial to the PBMs and weighs heavily against any finding of good cause for leave to amend. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to State a Claim. San Jose City, a municipality in California, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Impermissible Claim-splitting. San Jose City seeks leave to amend to add claims against the PBMs in two cases: City of San Jose v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corp., et al., No. 1:19-op-45768-DAP; and City of San Jose, California, et al. v. Sackler, et al., No. 1:19-op-45964-DAP. San Jose City's impermissible claim-splitting is a waste of judicial resources and should be rejected. See Waad, 762 F. App'x at 260–63 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court dismissed plaintiff's claims for improper claim splitting where the plaintiff's claims in a later-filed case were “duplicative of and improperly split” from an earlier-filed case); Stripling, 2023 WL 5120238, at *2–4 (dismissing subsequent suit based on the same facts pursuant to the Court's inherent authority and discretion to manage its own docket). It also demonstrates a fundamental lack of diligence on the part of Plaintiff and the PEC.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for San Jose City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. San Jose City filed its original complaint on August 2, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City Of San Jose v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45768-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that San Jose City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. San Jose City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF

No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. San Jose City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. San Jose City, a municipality in California, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1311. Oxford, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45774-DAP: Plaintiff Oxford City, Alabama

Oxford City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Oxford City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Oxford City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Oxford City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Oxford City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Oxford City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Oxford City filed its original complaint on August 27, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 18, 2019. See Oxford, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45774-DAP, ECF No. 12. Oxford City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Oxford City elected not to do so. Instead, Oxford City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Oxford City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Oxford City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.03% market share for Oxford City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Oxford City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Oxford City filed its original complaint on August 27, 2019. See Oxford, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45774-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Oxford City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1

(Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Oxford City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Oxford City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Oxford City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Oxford City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Oxford City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Oxford City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Oxford City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Oxford City filed its original complaint on August 27, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Oxford, Alabama, City of v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45774-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Oxford City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Oxford City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Oxford City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Oxford City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Oxford City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on August 27, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 ("This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations." (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Oxford City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1312. Ada County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45775-DAP: Plaintiff Ada County, Idaho

Ada County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Ada County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Ada County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Ada County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Ada County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Ada County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Ada County amended its complaint on October 8, 2019, after transfer to the MDL on September 6, 2019, as well as on December 22, 2020. See Ada County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45775-DAP, ECF Nos. 6, 11. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Ada County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaints. See Section II.A.1, above. Ada County's deadline to amend was in 2019. Ada County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Ada County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Ada County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.10% market share for Ada County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ada County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Ada County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.35% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Ada County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Idaho law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Ada County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Idaho law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Ada County, a municipality in Idaho, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Ada County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Ada County filed its original complaint on June 14, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Ada County v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45775-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Ada County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Ada County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Ada County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Ada County, a municipality in Idaho, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1313. Locust Fork, Town of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45777-DAP: Plaintiff Locust Fork Town, Alabama

Locust Fork Town’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Locust Fork Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Locust Fork Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Locust Fork Town’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Locust Fork Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Locust Fork Town was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Locust Fork Town filed its original complaint on August 12, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 6, 2019. See Locust Fork, Town of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45777-DAP, ECF No. 16. Locust Fork Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Locust Fork Town elected not to do so. Instead, Locust Fork Town waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Locust Fork Town's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Locust Fork Town's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Locust Fork Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Locust Fork Town's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.17% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Locust Fork Town to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Locust Fork Town filed its original complaint on August 12, 2019. See Locust Fork, Town of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45777-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Locust Fork Town never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Locust Fork Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Locust Fork Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Locust Fork Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Locust Fork Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Locust Fork Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Locust Fork Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Locust Fork Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Locust Fork Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Locust Fork Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Locust Fork Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Locust Fork Town's potential claims against them. Locust Fork Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Locust Fork Town's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Locust Fork Town, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Locust Fork Town's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Locust Fork Town filed its original complaint on August 12, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Locust Fork, Town of v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45777-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Locust Fork Town knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Locust Fork Town's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Locust Fork Town's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Locust Fork Town’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Locust Fork Town sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on August 12, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Locust Fork Town, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1314. City of Daleville, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45778-DAP: Plaintiff Daleville City, Alabama

Daleville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Daleville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Daleville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Daleville City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Daleville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Daleville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Daleville City filed its original complaint on August 7, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 6, 2019. See City of Daleville, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45778-DAP, ECF No. 24. Daleville City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Daleville City elected not to do so. Instead, Daleville City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Daleville City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Daleville City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Daleville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Daleville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

a finding of good cause for Daleville City to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Daleville City filed its original complaint on August 7, 2019. See City of Daleville, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45778-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Daleville City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Daleville City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Daleville City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Daleville City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Daleville City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Daleville City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Daleville City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Daleville City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Daleville City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Daleville City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Daleville City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Daleville

City's potential claims against them. Daleville City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Daleville City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Daleville City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Daleville City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Daleville City filed its original complaint on August 7, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Daleville, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45778-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Daleville City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Daleville City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Daleville City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Daleville City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Daleville City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on August 7, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Daleville City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1315. City of Dadeville, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45779-DAP: Plaintiff Dadeville City, Alabama

Dadeville City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Dadeville City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Dadeville City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Dadeville City’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Dadeville City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Dadeville City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Dadeville City’s geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.07% market share for Dadeville City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Dadeville City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Dadeville City filed its original complaint on August 7, 2019. *See City of Dadeville, Alabama v. 1316. Triad Health Systems, Inc. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45780-DAP: Plaintiff Triad Health Systems, Inc., Kentucky

Triad Health Systems, Inc.’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Triad Health Systems, Inc. failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Triad Health Systems, Inc. also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Triad Health Systems, Inc.’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Triad Health Systems, Inc. does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Triad Health Systems, Inc. filed its original complaint on September 6, 2019. See Triad Health Systems, Inc. v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45780-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Triad Health Systems, Inc. never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court’s orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Triad Health Systems, Inc.’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Triad Health Systems, Inc.’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. 1317. City of Orange Beach, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45784-DAP: Plaintiff Orange Beach City, Alabama

Orange Beach City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Orange Beach City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Orange Beach City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Orange Beach City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Orange Beach City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Moreover, Orange Beach City amended its complaint on October 28, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See City of Orange Beach, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma, L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45784-DAP, ECF No. 5. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Orange Beach City declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Orange Beach City's deadline to amend was in 2019. Orange Beach City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Orange Beach City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Orange Beach City’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Orange Beach City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—nearly five years after filing its original complaint on September 10, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Orange Beach City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1318. City of Warfield, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45787-DAP: Plaintiff Warfield City, Kentucky

Warfield City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Warfield City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Warfield City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Warfield City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Warfield City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Warfield City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Warfield City filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on September 13, 2019. *See City of Warfield, KY v. Warfield City's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.01% market share for Warfield City). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Warfield City to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Warfield City's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Warfield City filed its original complaint on September 13, 2019. See City of Warfield, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45787-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Warfield City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Warfield City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Warfield City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Warfield City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Warfield City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Warfield City has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Warfield City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Warfield City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Kentucky law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Warfield City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Kentucky law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Warfield City, a municipality in Kentucky, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Warfield City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Warfield City filed its original complaint on September 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Warfield, KY v. AmerisourceBergen Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45787-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Warfield City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. Warfield City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Warfield City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Warfield City, a municipality in Kentucky, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1319. Chariton County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45790-DAP: Plaintiff Chariton County, Missouri

Chariton County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Chariton County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Chariton County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Chariton County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Chariton County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Chariton County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Chariton County amended its complaint on December 11, 2019, after directly filing in the MDL. See Chariton County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45790-DAP, ECF No. 2. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Chariton County declined to add claims against the PBMs in its amended complaint. See Section II.A.1, above. Chariton County’s deadline to amend was in 2019. Chariton County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Chariton County’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice Through Counsel. Chariton County cannot meet the Rule 16 good cause standard because it is represented by the same counsel—Greene, Ketchum, Farrell, Bailey & Tweel, LLP; Powell & Majestro, PLLC; Levin, Papantonio, Thomas, Mitchell, Rafferty & Proctor, P.A.; and McHugh Fuller Law Group, PLLC—that filed claims against the PBMs in 2019. See MDL ECF No. 2582. Chariton County, through its counsel, was on notice of potential claims against the PBMs and could readily have amended its complaint to add the PBMs much earlier. Chariton County fails to explain why it was unable to assert claims against the PBMs in 2019 when its own attorneys were already asserting those claims on behalf of other clients. See, e.g., Duggins, 195 F.3d at 834 (affirming denial of leave to amend after the close of discovery when the “plaintiff was obviously aware of the basis of the claim for many months, especially since some underlying facts were made a part of the complaint”); Thurmond, 649 F. App’x at 1006 (affirming denial of leave to amend for undue delay in part because plaintiff’s counsel had access to discovery in related cases and was previously aware of the proposed new defendants’ conduct).

Decl. (0.01% market share for Chariton County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Chariton County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Missouri law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Chariton County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Missouri law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Chariton County, a municipality in Missouri, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Chariton County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Chariton County filed its original complaint on September 16, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Chariton County, Missouri v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45790-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Chariton County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. Chariton County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Chariton County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Chariton County, a municipality in Missouri, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1320. Town of Bennington, Vermont v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45791-DAP: Plaintiff Sharon Town, Vermont

Sharon Town's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Sharon Town failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Sharon Town also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Sharon Town's motion should be denied due to futility, as Sharon Town does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Sharon Town previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its complaint on December 16, 2019. See Town of Bennington, Vermont v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45791-DAP, ECF No. 1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts, Pharmacy, Inc.; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Sharon Town could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against other PBM-related entities in 2019. And while Sharon Town in 2023 secured leave from this Court to move to amend its complaint to add allegations against the PBMs, it failed to take advantage of that leave by ever actually filing a complaint. See Jan. 25, 2023 Order, Town of Bennington, Vermont v. Mallinckrodt

PLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45791-DAP. Now, Sharon Town again seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to add them before. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Sharon Town’s complaint, Sharon Town already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its original complaint against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A, above. Sharon Town was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Sharon Town’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Sharon Town cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts’ PBM Has No Market Share. Express Scripts’ PBM processed zero claims for prescription opioids in Sharon Town’s geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit A. Because Express Scripts’ PBM “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Sharon Town violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Sharon Town filed its original complaint on September 17, 2019, but waited until August 12, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—nearly five years later. See Town of Bennington, Vermont v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45791-DAP, ECF No. 1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: August 12, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Sharon Town's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Sharon Town's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Sharon Town's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Sharon Town therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Sharon Town failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Sharon Town's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Sharon Town of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Sharon Town refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Sharon Town's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Sharon Town's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Sharon Town's potential claims against them. Sharon Town's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Sharon Town, a municipality in Vermont, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Sharon Town’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Sharon Town filed a complaint on September 17, 2019, alleging a RICO claim against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc.; ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated, Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc. See Town of Bennington, Vermont v. Mallinckrodt PLC, et al., 1:19-op-45791-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Sharon Town knew of its injury and the factual basis for its alleged RICO claim against the PBMs, at the very latest, the day it filed that complaint, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. Sharon Town’s proposed amended RICO claim against the additional PBMs it did not previously name is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of the other elements of a claim”) (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555); see Section III.B.4, above. Sharon Town’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Sharon Town, a municipality in Vermont, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1321. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45792-DAP: Plaintiff Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund, New York

Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on August 28, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 18, 2019. See Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45792-DAP, ECF No. 8. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund elected not to do so. Instead, Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund began receiving those services on January 3, 2011. See id. Inasmuch as Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on August 28, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45792-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Laborers Local 235 Welfare Fund's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

Painting Industry Insurance Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Painting Industry Insurance Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Painting Industry Insurance Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Painting Industry Insurance Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Painting Industry Insurance Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Painting Industry Insurance Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Painting Industry Insurance Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 19, 2019. See Painting Industry Insurance Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45793-DAP, ECF No. 7. Painting Industry Insurance Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Painting Industry Insurance Fund elected not to do so. Instead, Painting Industry Insurance Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Painting Industry Insurance Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Painting Industry Insurance Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Painting Industry Insurance Fund began receiving those services on April 1, 2014. See id. Inasmuch as Painting Industry Insurance Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Painting Industry Insurance Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Painting Industry Insurance Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Painting Industry Insurance Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Painting Industry Insurance Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Painting Industry Insurance Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45793-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Painting Industry Insurance Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, nearly five years before seeking leave to amend. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period.

ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Painting Industry Insurance Fund, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Painting Industry Insurance Fund’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1323. CWA Local 1182 & 1183 Health & Welfare Funds v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45794-DAP: Plaintiff CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund, New York

CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund’s motion should be denied due to futility, as CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on August 27, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 20, 2019. See CWA Local 1182 & 1183 Health & Welfare Funds v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45794-DAP, ECF No. 7. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund elected not to do so. Instead, CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund began receiving those services on March 1, 2008. See id. Inasmuch as CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. CWA Local 1182 Health &

Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on August 27, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See CWA Local 1182 & 1183 Health & Welfare Funds v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45794-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that CWA Local 1182 Health & Welfare Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, nearly five years before seeking leave to amend. CWA Local 1183 Health & Welfare Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. CWA Local 1183 Health & Welfare Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. CWA Local 1183 Health & Welfare Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a

1326. Orange County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45797-DAP: Plaintiff Orange County, Florida

Orange County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Orange County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Orange County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Orange County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Orange County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Orange County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Orange County filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 20, 2019. See Orange County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45797-DAP, ECF No. 8. Orange County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Orange County elected not to do so. Instead, Orange County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Orange County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of opioid units shipped to Orange County's geographic jurisdiction over the ten-year period of 2010 to 2019. See Gustafson Decl. (0.13% market share for Orange County). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Orange County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has a Negligible Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped less than 0.5% of the total number of prescription opioid units shipped to Orange County's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit C (0.27% market share). That insignificant dispensing volume is much too low to support a finding of good cause for Orange County to add dispensing claims against Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy entities. See Section III.A.2, above.

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Orange County previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Orange County of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Orange County began receiving those services on January 1, 2009. See id. Inasmuch as Orange County seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Orange County knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Orange County's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Orange County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Orange County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Orange County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Orange County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Orange County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Orange County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Orange County’s potential claims against them. Orange County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Florida law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Orange County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Florida law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Orange County, a municipality in Florida, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Orange County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Orange County filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Orange County, Florida v. Purdue Pharma L.P., et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45797-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Orange County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Orange County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Orange County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Florida, public-nuisance claims are subject to a four-year limitations period. Orange County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Orange County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on August 29, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Orange County, a municipality in Florida, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1327. City of Covington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45799-DAP: Plaintiff Covington City, Virginia

Covington City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Covington City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Covington City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Covington City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Covington City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Covington City previously alleged claims against some of the PBMs in its original complaint on May 10, 2019. See City of Covington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45799-DAP, ECF No. 1-1 (bringing claims against Express Scripts Holding Company; Express Scripts, Inc.; UnitedHealth Group Incorporated; Optum, Inc.; and OptumRx, Inc.). Covington City also amended its complaint on October 29, 2019 to add claims against additional PBM-related entities. See id., at ECF No. 25 (adding claims against Express Scripts Pharmacy, Inc., and ESI Mail Pharmacy Service, Inc.). Now, Covington City seeks to add other PBM-related entities as defendants but offers no good cause for its failure to name these entities as defendants in its original or amended complaints. Covington City's deadline to amend was in 2019, but it waited five years after its deadline to seek leave to assert claims against the remaining PBMs. As described above, the omnibus motions say nothing about the majority of the entities that the Moving Plaintiffs seek to add as defendants to their complaints. And for those entities that were named in an earlier iteration of Covington City's complaint, Covington City already had access to the relevant documents it contends give rise to its proposed claims when it filed its prior complaints against the PBMs. See Section II.A, above. Covington City was not diligent in pursuing its claims against the PBMs and leave to amend should be denied for lack of good cause.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Covington City violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Covington City filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019, but waited until July 8, 2024 to implement a litigation hold—over five years later. See City of Covington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45799-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: July 8, 2024). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Covington City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Covington City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Covington City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Covington City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Covington City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Covington City’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Covington City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Covington City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Covington City’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Covington City’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Covington City’s potential claims against them. Covington City’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Virginia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Covington City’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Virginia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Covington City, a municipality in Virginia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Covington City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Covington City filed its original complaint on May 9, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Covington, Virginia v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45799-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Covington City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 9, 2023. Covington City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Covington City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Covington City, a municipality in Virginia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1328. City of Blackshear, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45802-DAP: Plaintiff Blackshear City, Georgia

Blackshear City’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Blackshear City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Blackshear City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Blackshear City's motion should be denied due to futility, as Blackshear City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Blackshear City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Blackshear City filed its original complaint on August 22, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 20, 2019. See City of Blackshear, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45802-DAP, ECF No. 4. Blackshear City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Blackshear City elected not to do so. Instead, Blackshear City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Blackshear City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Blackshear City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Blackshear City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Blackshear City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Blackshear City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Blackshear City's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Blackshear City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Blackshear City's potential claims against them. Blackshear City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Georgia law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Blackshear City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Georgia law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Blackshear City, a municipality in Georgia, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Blackshear City’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Blackshear City filed its original complaint on August 22, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See City of Blackshear, Georgia v. Amerisourcebergen Drug Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45802-DAP, ECF No. 1. Even assuming arguendo that Blackshear City first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO’s four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on August 22, 2023. Blackshear City’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Blackshear City’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Blackshear City, a municipality in Georgia, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1329. Charleston County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45803-DAP: Plaintiff Charleston County, South Carolina

Charleston County’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Charleston County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Charleston County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Charleston County’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Charleston County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Charleston County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Charleston County filed its original complaint on July 26, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 20, 2019. See Charleston County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45803-DAP, ECF No. 7. Charleston County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Charleston County elected not to do so. Instead, Charleston County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Charleston County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Charleston County filed its original complaint on July 26, 2019. See Charleston County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45803-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Charleston County never implemented a litigation hold and is instead purporting to rely on non-specific and unidentified document retention laws. See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: *(Never)). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Charleston County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Charleston County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Charleston County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Charleston County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under South Carolina law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Charleston County's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under South Carolina law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Charleston County, a municipality in South Carolina, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Charleston County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Charleston County filed its original complaint on July 26, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Charleston County, South Carolina v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45803-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Charleston County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Charleston County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Charleston County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

1330. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45808-DAP: Plaintiff NOITU Insurance Trust Fund, New York

NOITU Insurance Trust Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, NOITU Insurance Trust Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as NOITU Insurance Trust Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

NOITU Insurance Trust Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, NOITU Insurance Trust Fund elected not to do so. Instead, NOITU Insurance Trust Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, NOITU Insurance Trust Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

But NOITU Insurance Trust Fund’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for NOITU Insurance Trust Fund’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See NOITU Insurance Trust Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al.,

Case No. 1:19-op-45808-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that NOITU Insurance Trust Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. NOITU Insurance Trust Fund's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1331. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45809-DAP: Plaintiff Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund, New York

Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 23, 2019. See Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45809-DAP, ECF No. 7. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund elected not to do so. Instead, Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund began receiving those services on April 7, 2014. See id. Inasmuch as Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Local 8A-28A

Welfare Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund's failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries.

Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45809-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Local 8A-28A Welfare Fund’s request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1332. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45810-DAP: Plaintiff Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund, New York

Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's motion should be denied due to futility, as Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 24, 2019. See Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45810-DAP, ECF No. 7. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund elected not to do so. Instead, Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund began receiving those services on January 15, 2006. See id. Inasmuch as Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct more than ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund’s delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45810-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Drywall Tapers Insurance Fund, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. 1333. Nassau University Medical Center v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45812-DAP: Plaintiff Nassau University Medical Center, New York

Nassau University Medical Center's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Nassau University Medical Center failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Nassau University Medical Center also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Nassau University Medical Center's motion should be denied due to futility, as Nassau University Medical Center does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, and its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations.

Lack of Diligence. Nassau University Medical Center was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Nassau University Medical Center filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 24, 2019. See Nassau University Medical Center v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45812-DAP, ECF No. 8. Nassau University Medical Center could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Nassau University Medical Center elected not to do so. Instead, Nassau University Medical Center waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Nassau University Medical Center’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Nassau University Medical Center filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019. See Nassau University Medical Center v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45812-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Nassau University Medical Center never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Nassau University Medical Center’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Nassau University Medical Center’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Nassau University Medical Center’s disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Nassau University Medical Center therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Nassau University Medical Center’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Nassau University Medical Center, a hospital in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Nassau University Medical Center’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Nassau University Medical Center filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Nassau University Medical Center v. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Nassau University Medical Center’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Nassau University Medical Center, a hospital in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Nassau University Medical Center's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1334. Municipality of Villalba v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45815-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Villalba, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Villalba's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Villalba failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Villalba also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Villalba's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Villalba does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Villalba was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Villalba filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 25, 2019. See Municipality of Villalba v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45815-DAP, ECF No. 7. Municipality of Villalba could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Villalba elected not to do so. Instead, Municipality of Villalba waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Villalba's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx’s Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Municipality of Villalba’s geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Municipality of Villalba cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Municipality of Villalba filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019. See Municipality of Villalba v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45815-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Municipality of Villalba never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court’s orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Municipality of Villalba’s case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Municipality of Villalba’s document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024.

The PBMs are prejudiced by Municipality of Villalba's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Municipality of Villalba therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Municipality of Villalba failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Municipality of Villalba's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Municipality of Villalba of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Municipality of Villalba refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Municipality of Villalba's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Municipality of Villalba's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Municipality of Villalba's potential claims against them. Municipality of Villalba's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Municipality of Villalba, a municipality in Puerto Rico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Municipality of Villalba's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Municipality of Villalba filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. *See Municipality of Villalba v. Municipality of Villalba's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Municipality of Villalba, a municipality in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1335. Municipality of Catano, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45816-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Catano, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Catano's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Catano failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Catano also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover,

Municipality of Catano's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Catano does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Catano was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Catano filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 25, 2019. *See Municipality of Catano, Puerto Rico v. Municipality of Catano could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Catano elected not to do so. Instead, Municipality of Catano waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Catano's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Thus, Municipality of Catano cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Municipality of Catano filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019. See Municipality of Catano, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45816-DAP, ECF No. 1. The PBMs notified Municipality of Catano of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Municipality of Catano refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Municipality of Catano's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Municipality of Catano's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Municipality of Catano's potential claims against them. Municipality of Catano's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Municipality of Catano’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Municipality of Catano, a municipality in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1336. Municipality of Arroyo, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45817-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Arroyo, Puerto Ric

Municipality of Arroyo’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Arroyo failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Arroyo also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Arroyo’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Arroyo does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Arroyo was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Arroyo filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 25, 2019. See Municipality of Arroyo, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45817-DAP, ECF No. 8. Municipality of Arroyo could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Arroyo elected not to do so.

Instead, Municipality of Arroyo waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Arroyo's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's Home-Delivery Pharmacy Had Zero Dispenses. OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy did not dispense a single opioid prescription to Municipality of Arroyo's geographic jurisdiction over the period for which OptumRx has data (2010 to 2019). See Gustafson Decl. Because OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Municipality of Arroyo cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Express Scripts' Mail Order Pharmacy Has No Market Share. Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy shipped zero opioid prescriptions to Municipality of Arroyo's geographic jurisdiction during 2009 to 2019. See DeCarlo Decl., Exhibit B. Because Express Scripts' mail order pharmacy "ha[s] no market share, they shouldn't be in the case, period." ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Municipality of Arroyo filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019. See Municipality of Arroyo, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45817-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Municipality of Arroyo never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Municipality of Arroyo's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Municipality of Arroyo's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Municipality of Arroyo's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Municipality of Arroyo therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Municipality of Arroyo failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Municipality of Arroyo's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Municipality of Arroyo of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Municipality of Arroyo refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, Municipality of Arroyo's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Municipality of Arroyo's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Municipality of Arroyo's potential claims against them. Municipality of Arroyo's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Failure to State a Claim. Municipality of Arroyo, a municipality in Puerto Rico, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Municipality of Arroyo's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Municipality of Arroyo filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Municipality of Arroyo, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45817-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Municipality of Arroyo knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. Municipality of Arroyo's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Municipality of Arroyo's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Municipality of Arroyo, a municipality in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1337. Municipality of Bayamon, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45818-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Bayamon, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Bayamon's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Bayamon failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Bayamon also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or

Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Bayamon's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Bayamon does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Municipality of Bayamon was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Municipality of Bayamon filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 25, 2019. See Municipality of Bayamon, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45818-DAP, ECF No. 7. Municipality of Bayamon could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Municipality of Bayamon elected not to do so. Instead, Municipality of Bayamon waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Municipality of Bayamon's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Decl.. Because OptumRx’s home-delivery pharmacy “ha[s] no market share, they shouldn’t be in the case, period.” ECF No. 3685 at 6:9–14; see Section III.A.2, above. Thus, Municipality of Bayamon cannot show good cause to add claims against OptumRx in its capacity as a home delivery pharmacy.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Municipality of Bayamon filed its original complaint on August 29, 2019. *See Municipality of Bayamon, Puerto Rico v. 1338. Municipality of Ceiba, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45819-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Ceiba, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Ceiba's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Ceiba failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Ceiba also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Ceiba's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Ceiba does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

1339. Municipality of Coamo, Puerto Rico v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45820-DAP: Plaintiff Municipality of Coamo, Puerto Rico

Municipality of Coamo's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Municipality of Coamo failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Municipality of Coamo also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Municipality of Coamo's motion should be denied due to futility, as Municipality of Coamo does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Under this Court's orders, Municipality of Coamo's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Municipality of Coamo's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against Municipality of Coamo's potential claims against them. Municipality of Coamo's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that "plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation"); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Municipality of Coamo's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Municipality of Coamo, a municipality in Puerto Rico, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1340. County of Knox et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45822-DAP: Plaintiff Knox County, Maine

Knox County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Knox County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Knox County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to timely implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Knox County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Knox County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by state law in Maine, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Knox County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Knox County filed its original complaint on May 13, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 25, 2019. See County of Knox et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45822-DAP, ECF No. 50. Knox County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Knox County elected not to do so. Instead, Knox County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Knox County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

low to support a finding of good cause for Knox County to add dispensing claims against OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Timely Implement a Litigation Hold. Knox County violated its basic duty to implement a timely litigation hold. Knox County filed its original complaint on May 13, 2019, but waited until June 30, 2020 to implement a litigation hold—over one year later. See County of Knox et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45822-DAP, ECF No. 1-1; see also ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: June 30, 2020). This is a plain violation of this Court's orders. ECF Nos. 232; 5455. Litigating Knox County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Knox County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Knox County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Knox County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Knox County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Knox County’s health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Knox County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Knox County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Knox County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Knox County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Knox County’s potential claims against them. Knox County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Maine law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Knox County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Maine law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Knox County, a municipality in Maine, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

Plaintiff's Public Nuisance Claim is Futile. Knox County is a plaintiff in Maine. Knox County's request for leave to add the PBMs as defendants to a public nuisance claim should be denied as futile because such a claim is not cognizable under Maine law. E. Me. Med. Ctr., 2023 WL 2161256, at *6; see Section III.B.3, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Knox County's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Knox County filed its original complaint on May 13, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries for which it now seeks to recover under RICO against the PBMs. See County of Knox et al. v. Purdue Pharma LP et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45822-DAP, ECF No. 1-1. Even assuming arguendo that Knox County first learned of its injury on the day it filed its original complaint, RICO's four-year statute of limitations expired, at the very latest, on May 13, 2023. Knox County's RICO claim is therefore time-barred. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Knox County's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Knox County, a municipality in Maine, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1341. Russell County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45826-DAP: Plaintiff Russell County, Alabama

Russell County's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Russell County failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Russell County also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Russell County's motion should be denied due to futility, as Russell County does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Russell County was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Russell County filed its original complaint on September 6, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 26, 2019. See Russell County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45826-DAP, ECF No. 20. Russell County could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Russell County elected not to do so. Instead, Russell County waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Russell County's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

OptumRx's home-delivery pharmacy years after the amendment deadline. See Section III.A.2, above.

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. Russell County filed its original complaint on September 6, 2019. See Russell County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45826-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, Russell County never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating Russell County's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of Russell County's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by Russell County's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and Russell County therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, Russell County failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to Russell County's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified Russell County of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but Russell County refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court’s orders, Russell County’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Russell County’s refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs’ ability to defend against Russell County’s potential claims against them. Russell County’s failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Russell County’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Russell County, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Russell County’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Russell County filed its original complaint on September 6, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Russell County, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45826-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Russell County knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. Russell County’s RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO’s four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by “discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim” (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Russell County’s request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. Russell County’s public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because Russell County sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on September 6, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Russell County lacks statutory standing to assert a public nuisance claim under Alabama law because it “is clearly not an individual, nor a city, nor the [s]tate,” and thus amendment is futile. Lee County, 2022 WL 450810, at *4 (concluding an Alabama county lacked standing to bring a Ala. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Part III.B.3, above. Code § 6-5-121 claim); see Section III.B.3, above.

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Russell County, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester's complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1342. City of Alexander City, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45827-DAP: Plaintiff City of Alexander City, Alabama

City of Alexander City's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. City of Alexander City failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. City of Alexander City also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to implement a litigation hold, failure to submit a complete plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, City of Alexander City's motion should be denied due to futility, as City of Alexander City does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its proposed public nuisance claim is barred by the statute of limitations, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. City of Alexander City was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, City of Alexander City filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019 and the case was transferred to the MDL on September 27, 2019. See City of Alexander City, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45827-DAP, ECF No. 22. City of Alexander City could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, City of Alexander City elected not to do so. Instead, City of Alexander City waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. City of Alexander City's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Implement a Litigation Hold. City of Alexander City filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019. See City of Alexander City, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45827-DAP, ECF No. 1. Despite filing its case years ago, City of Alexander City never implemented a litigation hold, in violation of this Court's orders (ECF Nos. 232; 5455). See ECF No. 5687-1 (Date Litigation Hold Implemented: Never). Litigating City of Alexander City's case would force the parties and the Court to waste time and resources ascertaining the extent of City of Alexander City's document destruction and the appropriate sanctions—just as the parties were forced to do in the three PBM bellwethers that failed to implement litigation holds until 2024. The PBMs are prejudiced by City of Alexander City's disregard for its most basic discovery obligations as a litigant, compounded by the delay in seeking leave to amend, and City of Alexander City therefore lacks good cause for leave to amend its complaint. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28 (denying leave to amend in part because the passage of time resulted in significant prejudice due to the loss of documents or records); see also Section III.A.4, above.

Failure to Prosecute. In its Plaintiff Fact Sheet, City of Alexander City failed to provide complete answers to Questions I.B.8 and I.B.9, relating to City of Alexander City's health plans, carriers, third party administrators, and pharmacy benefit managers throughout the relevant time period. The PBMs notified City of Alexander City of this deficiency on September 16, 2024 (see Exhibit B), but City of Alexander City refused to amend or supplement its Fact Sheet. Under this Court's orders, City of Alexander City's case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. City of Alexander City's refusal to provide basic information related to its health care plans prejudices the PBMs' ability to defend against City of Alexander City's potential claims against them. City of Alexander City's failure to diligently prosecute its case, coupled with the prejudice against the PBMs, negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs' counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under Alabama law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But City of Alexander City's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under Alabama law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. City of Alexander City, a municipality in Alabama, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff from another state. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for City of Alexander City's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. City of Alexander City filed its original complaint on August 30, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See City of Alexander City, Alabama v. Purdue Pharma L.P. et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45827-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that City of Alexander City knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, five years before seeking leave to amend. City of Alexander City's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. City of Alexander City's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Public Nuisance Statute of Limitations. In Alabama, public-nuisance claims are subject to a two-year limitations period. City of Alexander City's public-nuisance claim against the PBMs is therefore time-barred because City of Alexander City sought leave to amend its complaint on July 29, 2024—five years after filing its original complaint on August 30, 2019—and the proposed amendment does not relate back to the original filing for purposes of the applicable statute of limitations. See Zakora, 44 F.4th at 480 (“This court has repeatedly held that an amendment which adds a new party creates a new cause of action and there is no relation back to the original filing for purposes of limitations.” (cleaned up)).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. City of Alexander City, a municipality in Alabama, lacks standing to state a claim for relief under any of the New York laws referenced in the City of Rochester’s complaint. See Section III.B.6, above.

1343. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45831-DAP: Plaintiff Structural Steel 806 Health Plan, New York

Structural Steel 806 Health Plan’s untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, Structural Steel 806 Health Plan’s motion should be denied due to futility, as Structural Steel 806 Health Plan does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, Structural Steel 806 Health Plan filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on September 26, 2019. See Structural Steel 806 Health Plan v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45831-DAP, ECF No. 1. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, Structural Steel 806 Health Plan elected not to do so. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan's lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a "wait-and-see approach" instead of timely moving to amend).

Prior Notice as an Express Scripts Client. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan previously entered into a contract with Express Scripts for PBM services related to utilization management and formulary development. See Achter Decl., Exhibit A. That contract notified Structural Steel 806 Health Plan of the PBM services Express Scripts provides and Structural Steel 806 Health Plan began receiving those services on April 3, 2014. See id. Inasmuch as Structural Steel 806 Health Plan seeks to add claims against Express Scripts entities related to utilization management or formulary placement (see, e.g., Rochester Am. Compl. ¶¶ 733, 741, 786–816, 821–22, 845), Structural Steel 806 Health Plan knew or should have known of the alleged wrongful conduct ten years before moving to amend. See Section III.A.3, above. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan's delay in seeking leave to amend negates any finding of good cause for leave to amend. Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (denying motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order's deadline because plaintiff "had all the information [she] needed" to bring claims before the deadline).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court's repeated instructions to the contrary, Structural Steel 806 Health Plan has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan's case is therefore subject to "dismiss[al] with prejudice" for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017 WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But Structural Steel 806 Health Plan’s delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs’ ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for Structural Steel 806 Health Plan’s proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan filed its original complaint on September 26, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See Structural Steel 806 Health Plan v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45831-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that Structural Steel 806 Health Plan knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528 U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. Structural Steel 806 Health Plan's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).

1344. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45832-DAP: Plaintiff International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713, New York

International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's untimely motion for leave to amend should be denied for several reasons. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 failed to provide notice of its proposed amendments through a proposed complaint. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 also lacks good cause under Rule 15 or Rule 16 due to a lack of diligence, failure to submit a plaintiff fact sheet, and because its untimely motion would unduly prejudice the PBMs. Moreover, International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's motion should be denied due to futility, as International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 does not assert any allegations tying the PBMs to its alleged harm, its RICO claim is barred by the statute of limitations, and it lacks standing to assert claims under New York state law.

Lack of Diligence. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 was on notice of its claims against the PBMs for years but failed to exercise due diligence by moving to amend earlier. See Section II.A, above. Moreover, International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 filed its original complaint directly into the MDL on September 26, 2019. See International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 1. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 could have amended its complaint, without leave, to add claims against the PBMs in 2019. See Section II.A.1, above. Unlike many other plaintiffs, International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 elected not to do so. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 waited five years after its deadline to amend to seek leave to assert claims against the PBMs. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713’s lack of diligence in pursuing its claims negates any finding of good cause. See Garza, 972 F.3d at 879 (affirming denial of motion to amend nine months after the scheduling order’s deadline because plaintiff “had all the information [she] needed” to bring claims before the deadline); Glazer, 704 F.3d at 459 (affirming denial of motion to amend because plaintiff took a “wait-and-see approach” instead of timely moving to amend).

Failure to Prosecute. Despite the Court’s repeated instructions to the contrary, International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 has never served a Plaintiff Fact Sheet. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713’s case is therefore subject to “dismiss[al] with prejudice” for failure to prosecute. ECF No. 4985 at 1 (emphasis in original); see Section III.A.5, above. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713’s failure to diligently prosecute its case negates any finding of good cause and leave to amend should be denied. See Final Amendment Order, ECF No. 5455 at 2 (directing counsel to dismiss, not seek leave to amend, in any case that “plaintiffs’ counsel does not intend to zealously pursue in litigation”); Range, 2017

WL 9477693, at *4 n.6 (denying motion for leave to amend as moot because claims were dismissed for failure to prosecute).

Prejudice Due to Loss of Evidence. Under New York law, the PBMs have the right to seek to allocate fault to other parties. See Section III.A.6, above. But International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's delay in seeking to amend its complaint has impaired the PBMs' ability to exercise those allocation-of-fault rights under New York law due to the loss of relevant evidence over time. That impairment substantially prejudices the PBMs in their ability to defend themselves. See Pethtel, 2020 WL 6827791, at *28.

Failure to State a Claim. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713, a third party payor in New York, has not pleaded any facts showing that the PBMs caused or substantially contributed to its injuries. Instead, it relies exclusively on the amended complaint of the City of Rochester, a differently situated plaintiff. See Section III.B.1, above.

RICO Statute of Limitations. The statute of limitations for International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's proposed RICO claim against the PBMs has expired. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 filed its original complaint on September 26, 2019, alleging the same type of injuries and alleging a RICO claim against other defendants. See International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 v. McKesson Corporation et al., Case No. 1:19-op-45832-DAP, ECF No. 1. It is therefore indisputable that International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713 knew of its RICO injury, at the very latest, the day it filed a complaint asserting a RICO claim, almost five years before seeking leave to amend. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's RICO claim is therefore time-barred by RICO's four-year limitations period. ECF No. 2568 at 13 (holding that the RICO limitations period is triggered by "discovery of the injury, not discovery of [the] other elements of a claim" (quoting Rotella, 528

U.S. at 555)); see Section III.B.4, above. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's request for leave to amend to add a RICO claim should be denied as futile. See Oakley, 2016 WL 1117596, at *5 (denying motion for leave to amend because RICO claims were time-barred).

Plaintiff Lacks Standing. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713, a third party payor in New York, lacks standing to assert a claim under NY SSL § 145-B because it is not New York City, a county in New York, or the state of New York. See Section III.B.6, above. International Brotherhood of Trade Unions Local 713's request for leave to amend its complaint to add a claim under NY SSL § 145-B is therefore futile and should be denied. Gallant, 2020 WL 9349975, at *2–3 (affirming denial of leave to amend where plaintiff lacked standing to assert the proposed claim).
